PREFACE.

THIS Dictionary, although founded on that of Dr. Webster, is not to be regarded as a mere reprint of any of the abridgments of the labours of that eminent lexicographer; for the Editor has not only rendered the work of another more accessible to the general public, but has also carefully brought it into conformity to the prevailing usage of the present day, and endeavoured to improve it in its various departments.

I. The Vocabulary has been pruned of numerous scientific terms that never occur in general literature, and that will be found more appropriately defined in scientific treatises; and of antique words that are seldom employed in modern composition, and that will generally be found explained in glossaries affixed to the works in which they are used. Many words of both classes, however, that are of frequent occurrence, have been carefully retained, and not a few of recent introduction will be found in our pages.

II. With respect to the Definitions, Webster's Dictionary has deservedly taken a high place in the public estimation, and it has accordingly been generally, although not slavishly, followed, as the Editor's professional knowledge enabled him, in a careful revision, to add to the clearness of many of the definitions; and, in the case of the objects of natural history, to add a brief description, or to point out an analogy to some other object that might be better known. The most important words have not only been defined, but an attempt has also been made, although necessarily on a limited scale, to exhibit their meaning with greater precision in sentences or clauses.

III. To words thus defined, numerous Synonymous terms have been added—a conspicuous feature in Dr. Webster's Dictionary—but not generally found in similar works of this size. After a clear definition of a word has been given, others that resemble it in general signification are presented to the student, who may thus vary and enrich his diction, and render his composition more agreeable and expressive.

IV. The Discrimination of synonymous words has been carefully made in about eighteen hundred instances. This feature was first introduced into a general Dictionary by Barclay, and discriminations of this kind in many instances were felicitously accomplished by Webster; the same plan was still farther carried out by Goodrich, who availed himself of the valuable work of Crabb; and, while the fruit of their labours has enriched our pages, we have endeavoured to render them still more valuable. "One great object," says Professor Goodrich, "of these discriminations, besides affording aid in the exact use of terms, has been to awaken in young writers a desire for making similar distinctions themselves. Nothing could be more useful as a discipline of their mental powers, nothing more adapted to fix indelibly in their minds the true meaning of the terms they use, than to take up an exercise of this kind in a systematic manner and on a broad scale. To aid in this, a list is given of nearly all the words here discriminated. Let the teacher select a series of exercises for a class of advanced pupils—let those who are engaged in self-culture do it for themselves; and let the rule be, that the young writer shall first endeavour to distinguish for himself between the words selected; that

... and using them to the test of his own
... ; and that he does by framing short sentences, in which the words discriminated are each of them used in their peculiar and appropriate sense. 'The great source of a loose style,' says Dr. Blair, 'is the injudicious use of synonymous terms;' the great remedy lies in such a course of exercises as is here proposed." In making these discriminations we have in several instances pointed out the difference of usage in Britain and America. Instances will occur under the respective vocabularies, and others of a similar nature will be found by examining the List of Synonymous Words.

V. Great care has been bestowed on the subject of Pronunciation. In this department Walker has chiefly been followed; but those changes that have taken place since his time have been pointed out, and further reference has been made to them in our Introduction. In cases of considerable difference, the preference has been given to that sanctioned by the most recent orthoepists; and, in some cases, in which decision was difficult, the different methods have been given, with the authority for each mode of pronunciation.

VI. What has been stated with regard to Orthoepy is true also in respect to Orthography. The spelling of the English language is far more unsettled and anomalous than those who have not investigated the subject can possibly be aware. Worcester has given a vocabulary of upwards of fifteen hundred words that are either of doubtful or various orthography; and states that in some cases the one orthography is nearly, or quite, as well authorised as the other. A few remarks on this subject will be found in another page, and, as there stated, the orthography of the present day has been exhibited in these pages, and variations, when important, have been carefully indicated. Dr. Webster endeavoured to carry out the acknowledged analogies of language; but in this country the changes suggested have not been adopted by our principal writers.

VII. The Appendix contains,

1. WALKER'S KEY TO THE PRONUNCIATION OF CLASSICAL AND SCRIPTURE PROPER NAMES, with the improvements of subsequent writers on these subjects.

2. A VOCABULARY OF MODERN GEOGRAPHICAL PROPER NAMES, founded on Baldwin's Pronouncing Gazetteer, whose editor was Dr. Joseph Thomas, and will be of immense service to the student of Geography, or reader of History and Travels.

3. TABLES of the ABBREVIATIONS USED IN WRITING AND PRINTING.

4. A COLLECTION OF LATIN, FRENCH, AND ITALIAN WORDS AND PHRASES of frequent occurrence, with their translations.

5. A CONCISE ACCOUNT OF THE PRINCIPAL DEITIES AND HEROES OF ANTIQUITY, which will prove serviceable to readers of Ancient History and Heathen Mythology.

6. A SECOND APPENDIX of useful information to the Student of English.

The Editor confidently trusts that this Dictionary presents, in a convenient form, an amount of information that will essentially aid the student of English literature, and materially assist the reader of Ancient History or Modern Travels. The preparation of the work has occupied a length of time of which the Editor had formed no conception when he undertook it; and, when the amount of labour which it involves is estimated, and the minute manipulation required on the part of the printer is considered, it is hoped that indulgence will be extended to any error of judgment, or slip of inadvertency that may be discovered; for, while "every other author may aspire to praise, the Lexicographer can only hope to escape reproach."

K E Y

TO THE SOUNDS OF THE POINTED LETTERS.

VOWELS.

REGULAR LONG AND SHORT SOUNDS.

LONG—Ā ā, as in fame; E ē as in mete; I i, as in fine; Ō ō, as in note; OO [Ger. U], as in U u, as in mule; Ȳ ȳ, as in fly
 SHORT—Ā ā, as in fat; E ē, as in met; I i, as in fin; Ō ō, as in not; QQ qq (short oo), as in foot; Ȳ ȳ, as in any.

REGULAR DIPHTHONGAL SOUNDS.

PROPER DIPHTHONG OI or OY (unmarked), as in toil, join, foil, boy, coy, toy.
 PROPER DIPHTHONG OW (unmarked), as in now, plow. When irregular, the sound is marked, īow, ēow.
 PROPER DIPHTHONG OU (unmarked), as in pound. When irregular, the word is re-spelled, as in (root).
 IMPROPER DIPHTHONGS. In these, the vowel which is sounded is marked, as in ām, clēan, cēil, (but this is unnecessary in respect to ee, as in feel). Often they are re-spelled. So also of thongs.

OCCASIONAL VOWEL SOUNDS.

Examples.
Ā as in cave.....AIR, SHARE, PAIR, BEAR.
Ā Italian.....FATHER, FAR, BALM, PATH.
ā as in last.....ASH, GRASS, DANCE, BRANCH.
ā as in all.....CALL, TALK, HAIL, SWARM.
ā as in what.....WAN, WANTON, WALLOW.
Ē like ā.....THERE, HĒIR, WHĒRE, ĒRE.
Ē as in term.....VĒRGE, VĒRDURE, PĒFER.
Ī like long e.....PIQUE, MACHINE, MYEN.
ī as in bird.....FIRM, VIRGIN, DIET.

Examples.
Ō like short u.....DŌVE, SŪN, DŌNE, WŌP.
Ō like long oo.....PROVE, DO, MOVE, TOM.
Ō like short oo.....WOLF, WOLSET.
QQ (short oo).....FQQT, BQQK, WQQL, WQQ.
Ū long, preceded by r.....RŪDE, RŪMOUR, RŪRAL.
Ȳ like qq (short oo).....BȲLL, PȲT, FȲSH, PȲLL.
E (italic), marks a letter as silent.....FALLEN, TOKEN.

CONSONANTS.

Examples.
C c soft (unmarked), like s sharp.....CEDE, MERCY.
C c hard, like k.....CALL, CARRY.
CH ch (unmarked), like tsh.....CHILD, CHOOSE.
CH ch soft, like sh.....MACHINE, CHAISE.
CH ch hard, like k.....CHORDS, EPOCH.
G g hard (unmarked).....GO, GALLANT.
G g soft, like j.....GENTLE, AGED.
S s sharp (unmarked).....SAME, GAS.
S s soft, like z.....HAS, AMUSE.

Examples.
TH th sharp (unmarked).....THING, FATH.
TH th flat or vocal.....THINE, THEIR.
NG ng.....LONGER, CONGE.
PH ph like f (unmarked).....PHAETON, SYLPH.
QU qu like kw (unmarked).....QUEEN, INQUIRY.
WH wh like hw (unmarked).....WHEN, WHILE.
 *  The double accent [ʹʹ], in such words as vʹʹictiʹʹtious, &c., shows that the subsequent has the sound of sh.

PRINCIPLES OF PRONUNCIATION,

WITH

REMARKS ON THE KEY.

VOWELS.

ACCENTED SYLLABLES.

§ 1. Every accented syllable has its vowels marked with the pointed letters of the Key. These will now be considered under three heads, viz., their long, their short, and their occasional sounds.

LETTER A.

§ 2. The regular long or name sound, marked Ā ā, as in day, aim, &c.; heard also in pain, break, veil, inveigh, whay, &c.

NOTE.—This vowel is in most cases diphthongal, having a slight “vanish” in ā annexed to its radical or initial sound, as in pay, where the y represents the vanish, as if printed paā.

§ 3. The regular short sound, marked Ā ā, as in at, carry, tariff; heard also in fat, bade, rillery, &c.

NOTE.—This is a distinct element from the long a. Its regular sound is so exceedingly short and close, that, perhaps, in no language but our own is there that complete shutting or stoppage of the sound at the moment of its utterance, which it represents.

OCCASIONAL SOUNDS OF A.

§ 4. The sound of a before r in such words as care, fair, parent, marked Ā ā. The letter e has the same sound in a few words, such as there, where, their, heir, &c.

Two errors in opposite extremes are here to be avoided: (1.) That of the vulgar, who pronounce careful, carful, &c.; (2.) That of some among the educated classes in the provinces, who pronounce pair, parent, &c., as if spelt pay'er, pay'-rent, &c.

Some have considered the a in care as a distinct element, corresponding substantially to the è grave of the French. This correspondence is maintained by the French orthoepists, who say that our word care has the same sound (except that we do not roll the r) with their word mère: our word pair with their word père; our word share with their word chère, &c., the sound of a in care, pair, &c., is rather more open than that of è grave in the mouth of a Parisian.

Smart, however, does not admit the sound in question to be a distinct element; he maintains that it is truly our long a in fame, and owes all its peculiarity to the subsequent r. The sound of r in these words is what he calls a “guttural vibration” (see § 69)—a sound which he represents by ur, and Dr. Webster by er. In care we touch lightly on the a sound (the radical alone without the “vanish,” see § 2), and then pass fully and strongly into the guttural vibration (cāur or cāer), drawing the two as closely as possible into the same syllable—so closely that the r actually blends with the previous vowel. In like manner, parent is sounded pāur'ent or pāer'ent; and fair has the sound of fāer'-y, as the word was actually spelt by Spenser in the title of his “Faery Queen.” It is important, however, not to dwell so long on the a as to produce the peculiarity of pay'rent, mentioned above. The true sound arising from the combination of the two is (in consequence of the opening power of the r) a decidedly open or broad one.* Smart refers also with approbation to another mode of identifying the sound in question, viz., that of prolonging our short e before r. Thus, ther (with the e as in then), drawn out into long quantity, gives us there; and er (the first syllable in error) gives us ere or é'er (äre), as heard in when'er. Here, again, the caution will bear to be repeated, not to dwell too long on the slender sound of the vowel †. When, therefore, the long sound of a occurs before r, it appears to drop the terminal e and to retain only its radical sound; hence, in the opinion of several orthoepists, has arisen the necessity for using a distinctive mark for this a in such a position: in this work it has accordingly been marked ā. Should any one fail, however, to perceive the difference between the sound of a in pain, and that of the same letter in père, he may regard them as identical, in conformity with the usage of most orthoepists.

§ 5. The sound of the Italian a, marked Ā ā, as in ah, fär, fäther; heard also in heart, hearth, aunt, hunch, path, psalm, äre, and gape—though the last word is now extensively pronounced gāpe, and is so marked by Smart and other recent lexicographers.

* Many accurate speakers pronounce the a in parent with rather more slenderness of sound than in pair, while they carefully avoid the extreme of pay'-rent. So also in transparent, and some other words.

† Many pronounce there, &c., with a sound rather more slender than they give to pair, being the same sound with that of parent, mentioned in the preceding note.

§ 33. The regular short sound, marked Y y, as in tyranny, &c.

NOTE.—Y has only one occasional sound, viz., in such words as myrrh, in which it has, like the e and i in similar circumstances (see § 13 and § 17), very nearly the sound of short u. This is here indicated by respelling.

REGULAR OR PROPER DIPHTHONGS.

§ 34. OI or OY, as heard in join, boy, &c. These require no distinctive mark, having the same sound in all but four words, Shamols (shammy), choir (quire), tortoise (tortia), turquois (sometimes pronounced turkees).

§ 35. OW, as heard in cow, brown, flower, &c.

NOTE.—In a few words ow has the sound of long o. These are accordingly distinguished by the proper mark, as in blow, slow, know, &c.

§ 36. OU. This diphthong has two principal sounds:

(1.) That of ow in words derived from the Saxon, as in pound, round, &c.

(2.) That of oe in words derived from the French, as in soup, group, &c.

NOTE.—The word route, being directly from the French, has more commonly the French sound (roût), while roust has the Saxon sound in ow. The word wood, which, from its Saxon origin, ought to have the sound of ow, has, to a great extent, taken the French sound (woond), notwithstanding the remonstrances of Walker and other orthoepists against this irregularity.

§ 37. The diphthong ow has also, in a few cases, the sound of the broad a, as in bought (bawt); sometimes that of the short u, as in adjourn (adjurn), and of oo (like wood) in the words could, would, should. These peculiarities are indicated in this Dictionary by respelling.

UNACCENTED SYLLABLES.

§ 38. When unaccented syllables end in a consonant, their vowel, if single, has its regular short sound, as in de-sign', con'duct, con'flict, &c. But some words from the classics have the vowel long, as cantharids, and are so marked.

§ 39. When the unaccented syllable does not end in a consonant, two cases arise, viz.:

(1.) The syllable may end in a vowel, as in the words di-rect', de-mur', do-main', &c.

(2.) The syllable may end in a consonant, with final s mute at the close of words, as in ul'ti-mate, fi'nite, rep'tile, &c.

The former of these will, for the sake of brevity, be called No. 1, and the latter No. 2. These will now be considered under each of the vowels.

LETTER A.

§ 40. No. 1. Here the final a has usually the shut sound of the Italian a, as in Cu'ba, a-muse', A-mer'i-ca, &c. But in some words, like a-e'ri-al, cha'otic, &c., the a has the long, slender sound, on account of the subsequent vowel.

§ 41. No. 2. Here the a has sometimes its long or slender sound, particularly in verbs ending in ate, such as ded'i-cate, ed'u-cate, &c. In other parts of speech the sound of the a is more obscure, verging toward short e, as in ul'ti-mate, night'in-gale, &c. In some instances it verges toward short o or i, as in village.

LETTER E.

§ 42. No. 1. Here the final e has its long or open sound, slightly obscure or abridged, as in e-vent', e-mo'tion, so-ci'e-ty, &c.

§ 43. No. 2. Here also the e has usually its open sound a little shortened and obscured, as in ob-scure, &c. In some instances it verges toward short i, as in college.

LETTER I.

There is great diversity in the case of this letter. Hence it is difficult to lay down general rules; and Smart remarks, "The inquirer must be sent to the Dictionary to learn, in each particular case, the true pronunciation."

§ 44. No. 1. I, when final, has more commonly its short sound, as in phil'o-s'o-phy, d'i-rect, &c. But the i is usually long in the case of initial syllables commencing in i, bi, chi, ck, cri, pri, tri, as in i-ni-de'a, bi-o'l'o-gy, cri-te'ri-on, pri-me'val, &c.

§ 45. No. 2. In these terminations usage is greatly divided. On the whole, the i is more generally short, as in irri-n-ite, fec'tile, ad-a-man'tine, &c.; but there are some important exceptions, as ex'ile, gen'tile, con'cu-bine, ste'a-tite, &c. Here the Dictionary must be consulted for the several words.

LETTER O.

§ 46. No. 1. Here the final o has usually its long sound slightly abbreviated, and usually without its "vanish" (see § 18), as in o-pin'ion, mot'to, to-bac'co, &c.

§ 47. No. 2. The o in these terminations has usually its regular long sound, as in tel'e-scope, ep'ode, &c. Sometimes the o verges toward short e, as in di'a-logue, or toward short u, as in pur'pose.

LETTER U.

§ 48. No. 1. Here the final u has its long sound slightly abridged, as in ed'u-cate, mon'u-ment, &c. Hence these words are thus respelt, ed'y-n-cate, mon'y-u-ment. But when the u is preceded by r, as in erudition, it drops the y sound, and is pronounced eruy-dition.

§ 49. No. 2. The u in these terminations should retain its regular long or open sound slightly abridged, as in gratitude, institute, literature, &c. Care should be taken never to change these into mere oo, as gratitood for gratitude, institoot for institute.

In some cases the u is more shortened, as, for example, in nature, lecture, facture, &c. The mode of respelling words under this section is the same as in the preceding one, nature being respelt nat'y-ur, lecture, lect-y-ur, &c.

Three cautions are under this head requisite. (1.) Never sink the u into the sound of the short a, making natur, natur, &c. (2.) Never change the letter t into ch, giving natur the sound of nashure or nachoor. (3.) Never insert a j after d, giving educate the sound of educate, &c. The last two peculiarities, though sanctioned by Walker, are now condemned by most orthoepists. Knowles speaks of it as an "absolute vulgarity and absurdity" thus to distort words like educate, &c., from the simplicity of their spelling, by inserting consonant sounds which are entirely out of place.

LETTER Y.

§ 50. No. 1. Here y final has usually its short sound, as in hy-po-cri-sy, my-thol'o-gy, &c.; but final syllables in fy and ply have the y long, as in jus'ti-fy, multi-ply, &c.

§ 51. No. 2. The y in these terminations (which are few in number) is long, as in ne'o-phyte, pros'e-lyte, &c.

REMARKS ON THE KEY.

SILENT VOWELS:

§ 52. Vowels which are printed in italics are not to be sounded, as the e in used, burden, &c. Some of these cases require a more particular consideration.

EN with E silent.

§ 53. Most words ending in en drop the e, as often (off'n), heaven (heav'n), heathen (heath'n) even (ev'n), &c. One of the most prevalent errors of the present day, especially among our clergy (for the laity have fallen into it much less) is that of pronouncing the word even (evn) even; heaven (heavn) heavun or heaven; heathen (heathn) heathen or heathun; often (off'n) often, &c. Walker remarks with great keenness on this error, declaring it to be a "puerile and false pronunciation." The following are the only words in which the e should be sounded: Eden, aspen, chicken, hyphen, kitchen, jerken, mitten, patten, platen, sudden, and sloven. The e is also sounded when preceded by the liquids l, m, n, as in woollen; &c., though fallen, stolen, and swollen omit the e.

ON with O silent.

§ 54. Many words ending in on preceded by c, ck,

& so., omit the o, as in recker (reck'n), bacon (bak'n), mutton (mut'n), &c.

ED with E silent.

§ 55. The termination ed is usually shortened (by dropping the e) in the preterite of verbs, and in participles in ed, when the e is not preceded by d or t; as in loved (lov'd), proved (prov'd), &c. When d or t precede the e, as in amended contended, such an omission is impossible. There are, however, a few participial adjectives in which the e is commonly sounded, namely, learned, blessed, cursed, stricken, streaked, aged, &c. We do not, therefore, speak of a learn'd man, but of a learned man.

Terminations in EL.

§ 56. As a general rule, the e is sounded in these terminations, as in gravel, level, novel, vessel, chapel, &c. To omit the e in such cases, pronouncing chapel chap'l, novel nov'l, &c., is generally regarded as a vulgarism. The following are nearly all the words of this kind in which the e is properly omitted, viz., drivel, grovel, navel, ravel, rivel, shovel, snivel, shrivel, weasel, chattel, mantel, and, according to some, though not many orthoepists model.

CONSONANTS.

§ 57. A part of the consonants, viz, b, d, f, j, k, l, m, p, and w, have one uniform sound, and therefore need no comment in this place. The following consonants however require to be considered; and some additional observations will be found in connection with the respective letters in the Dictionary.

C.

§ 58. C unmarked has the sound of s, as in cede, consider, ceil, &c.

§ 59. C marked thus C, e, has the sound of k, as in cape, cope, cup, &c.

NOTE.—C (like s and t) takes the sound of sh when immediately preceded by the accent, and followed by ea, ie, io, or ous, as in ocean, social, Phocion, saponaceous.

C has also the sound of s in sacrifice, suicide, and discern, with their derivatives.

CH.

§ 60. Ch unmarked (English ch) has very nearly the sound of ts, as in chair, child, choose, &c.

NOTE.—Walker and others mark the ch, when preceded by l or n, with the sound of simple sh, respelling flinch, flish, Welch, Welsh, bench, bench, &c. while Knowles, Smart, and other orthoepists give ch the same sound that it has in rich.

§ 61. Ch marked thus, Ch, ch (French ch) has the sound of sh, as in chagrin, chaire, machine, &c.

NOTE.—Most words of this kind are derived from the French. Hence the word chivalry, being from that language, ought regularly to be pronounced shivalry, and not tehivalry, and is so marked by able orthoepists.

§ 62. Ch marked thus, CH, eh in words derived from the ancient languages, has the sound of k, as in chaem, character, &c. Ch is always hard (like k) before l and r, as in chlorine, chriem, Christian.

G.

§ 63. G unmarked has the hard sound of that letter in the word go, as in gave, give, gun, &c.

NOTE.—In such words as longer, stronger, &c., the g performs a double office: it unites with the preceding n to form the sound of ng, and is again repeated in the subsequent syllable—thus long'ger, strong'ger, &c. To indicate this fact, the character N is used in the former syllable. There is another class of words, like sing'ger, in which the g does not thus pass into the subsequent syllable.

In the digraph Gh, at the beginning of words, the h is silent, as in ghost; at the end of words, both letters are commonly silent, as in high, wigh, &c.; in some words, however, it has the sound of f, as in rough, lough; while ough, at the end of words, has no fewer than seven different sounds, which have been ingeniously combined in the following lines:—

" 'Tis not an easy task to show
How o u g h sound; since though,
An Irish lough, and English lough,
And cough and hiccough, all allow.
Differ as much as tough and through;
Yet none can tell us why they do."

In ght as a termination, gh are always silent; as, fight, right, &c.; except draught, which is pronounced, and, in certain senses, written draft.

§ 64. G marked thus, G g (g soft), has the sound of j, as in gender, general, gaol, &c.

H.

§ 65. This letter is a simple breathing or aspiration, and it is silent at the beginning of many words, as hair, heiress, herb, herbage, honest, honour, honourable, hour, with their derivatives. The h is also marked as silent by most orthoepists in hospital, humour, and humble, with their derivatives. But there is an increasing tendency to sound the h in these words. It is always silent after r, as rheum.

N, NG, and NK.

§ 66. The letter n has a slightly nasal sound; ng and nk are decidedly nasal. The latter are simple elementary sounds, and are not (as might be supposed) a compound sound made up of the letter n in conjunction with g and k. In forming ng the nostrils are not completely closed, but so much so as to produce a marked vibration, which may be continued to any length, as in sing, bring, &c. In forming nk, the nostrils are entirely closed after the first vibration, not allowing the vibration (as in ng) to be further prolonged, as in sink, think. It is therefore undesirable to respell such words as sink, brink, &c. by the use of ng, as they are not so pronounced; for no one sounds sink like sing with a k following, thus sing-k.

PH.

§ 67. This digraph has usually the sound of f, as in phrase, physis, philter, &c. In Stephen it has the sound of v; and, according to most orthoepists, it has the same sound in nephew (nev'ew); but in triphthong the h is silent.

Q.

§ 68. Q is always followed by u, and has usually, in connection with that vowel, the sound of kw, as in queen, quail, &c.; but in many words derived from the French, it has the sound of k, as in oquette, etiquette.

R.

§ 69. This letter may be viewed under three aspects:

(1.) Initial r, as in Rome, rip, where it has a jarring, trilling, or rolling sound.

(2.) Final r, as in far, carol, &c., which has a softer sound. The trill here immediately marks the provincial.

(3.) R connected with a guttural sound (called by Smart a "guttural vibration"), as heard in such words as fare, mere, ire, ore, ure, poor, our, &c. Here the character r represents two sounds, viz., an indefinite vowel sound resembling short u, and a partially-formed soft r, so that the above words are pronounced fäur, mäur, iur, &c. Hence the letter r, under these circumstances, is said to have an "opening power": it brings in an obscure vowel sound, which serves to modify whatever vowel precedes the r, so that Smart says "the vowel sounds in fare, mere, ire, ore, ure, poor, our, do not quite identify with those in feld, mais, idé, ode, cube, pool, out." See this adverted to in § 4.

§ 70. S unmarked has its regular sharp or hissing sound, as in some, gas, usus, &c.

§ 71. S, when marked thus, ß, s, has the sound of s, as in has, was, &c.

NOTE.—There has been much diversity among orthoepists as to the sound of s in words commencing in dis, as disarm, disburse, &c. Walker laid down this rule: "It (s) ought always to be pronounced like s when unaccented, and followed by an accented flat mute (b, d, g hard, v), a liquid (l, m, n, r), or a vowel." Hence he gave pronunciation like the following, disbad, disbud; disedify, disedify; disjoin, disjoin; dislike, dislike; dislodge, dislodge, &c. Scarcely any subsequent orthoepist has gone so far. Webster's Dictionary gives s the sound of s in only the following words, viz., disarm, disaster, discern, disease, dishair, dishonest, dishonour, dismal, disown, dissolve. The Imperial, Craig, and Wright agree almost to a word with Webster. Perry and Knowles give the s sound even in fewer words: Smart gives it in about eight more; Jameson and Boag go still further; but, with one or two exceptions, the orthoepists as a body have condemned the extent to which Walker has gone in this respect.

§ 72. S takes the sound of sh in words ending in sion, preceded by a liquid or another s, as in reversion, passion, &c., together with a few other words such as sure, sugar, censure, nauseate, &c.

§ 73. S has the sound of sk in words ending in sion preceded by a vowel, as in revision, decision, &c., and also in some other words, particularly those in ure, as measure, pleasure, &c.

T.

§ 74. T, like s and c, is aspirated when it immediately follows the accent, and is itself followed by the diphthongs ae, ie, io, as in partial, patient, station, nation, &c.

TH.

§ 75. Th unmarked has its hard sharp or aspirated sound, as in thing, breath, &c.

§ 76. Th marked thus, TH, th, has it flat, soft, or vocal sound, as in this, then, with, &c.

NOTE.—Nouns which, in the singular, end in th sharp, have usually the same ending in the plural, as death, deaths; sabbath, sabbaths, &c.; but the following five words have their plurals in th vocal, viz., bath, lath, mouth, oath, and path, as baths, paths, &c. From this list truth must be carefully excluded.

WH.

§ 77. The true sound of this digraph is obtained by reversing the order of the letters, thus: hw; s, g, when, hwen; while, hwile; whip, hwip. In some the w is silent, as who, whole.

X.

§ 78. This letter has two sounds, viz., its regular sharp sound like ks, as in expect, tax, &c., and its soft or flat sound like gz, as in exasp, &c. This latter sound occurs when the syllable which immediately follows the x begins with an accented vowel, as in exasp, exalt, example, &c.; but, even in this case, the sound of gz is not always given to the x.

Z.

§ 79. The leading sound of this letter is heard in such words as zeal, hazy, &c. In a few words it takes the sound of sh as in seizure (shishure), azure.

ACCENT.

§ 80. Accent is the stress that is laid on a particular syllable of a word, which is accordingly said to be accented as in the case of the syllable cent, in the word which has just been used. The placing of this accent not only affects the meaning of the word, but also the sounds both of the vowels and consonants of which the word is composed, and is emphatically indicative of the foreigner and the native, the vulgar and the polite. Thus, with regard to the word character, the Englishman would say char'acter, the Irishman char'acter, and the Frenchman char'acter.

The general tendency of our language is to place the accent on the former syllable of dissyllables, and on the antepenult of polysyllables, or to throw the accent backwards; but there are so many exceptions that this statement can only be regarded as indicating the general tendency of the language. Trisyllables and polysyllables have usually more than one accent; the principal, which alone is commonly marked, is called the primary, the others, the secondary; thus, in alternation, the primary falls on the penultimate, and the secondary on the first syllable of the word. In some words, however, the primary and secondary accents are so nearly of equal force, that they are not unfrequently interchanged, "making," as Walker remarks, "the secondary principal and the principal secondary." He specifies violin, referee, privateer, artisan, courtesan, charlatan, and might have added ambuscade, cavalcade, caricature, etiquette, reverie, confidante, governante, invalid, parachute, and others of foreign origin. Nearly all of these, except the first three, have now (according to able orthoepists) transferred the primary accent from the last to the first syllable, as in artisan, &c., under the operation of a principle which is stated in § 87.

DIVIDED USAGE.

§ 81. In a very large number of words, there is a diversity of practice among good speakers as to the place of the primary accent. This arises mainly from a conflict between certain great principles which affect the seat of the accent. A few of these may now be mentioned, with a view to account for this diversity. It is all that can be done in a brief sketch like this.

§ 82. FIRST PRINCIPLE.—Derivatives take for a time, if not permanently, the accent of their primitives, especially if they are terms of art, as in resolve from resolvō, demonstrate from demonstrō, ally from allier. So also research, renounce, abdomen, acumen, bitumen, curation, &c.

§ 83. SECOND PRINCIPLE.—Ease of utterance has some influence in deciding the place of the accent. Acceptable, receptacle, and utensil, as fashionable in the days of Walker, have now taken the easier accentuation of accept'able, recept'acle, and uten'sil. Essayist is marked essay'ist by Walker, Webster, and the Imperial, and is given both ways by Worcester. Discrepant, and discrepancy are marked discrep'ant and discrep'an'cy by Richardson, Knowles, Webster, and others. Subaltern (instead of Walker's sub'altern) is the accentuation of Richardson, Knowles, and many more. Confessor has superseded Walker's con'fessor, and has the support of Perry, Ash, Rees, Barclay, Webster, and Worcester. Consistory has given way to consist'ory in the marking of Knowles, Barclay, Reid, Brande, and others. These may serve as instances of the application of this principle. It is an important one in its place; and, although it may give rise for a time to a diversity of pronunciation, yet changes of this kind, which promote ease of utterance, are likely to prevail.

DISSYLLABLES.

§ 84. THIRD PRINCIPLE.—In words of two syllables, there is a tendency (though with numerous exceptions) to accent the former or penultimate syllable, as in a'gus, bar'on, com'mon, dis'cord, &c.

NOTE.—(1) This tendency meets with a powerful counteraction in the principle that derivatives retain the accent of their primitives, as in amuse', deter', offend', &c. It is natural, in such formatives, to continue the accent of the original; and hence some hundreds of our dissyllables, especially verbs and adverbs, have their accent on the last syllable.

(2) Still there is a constant struggle (especially among the common people, who are unacquainted with the derivation of words) to draw back the accent to the first syllable. Here arises another conflict, which produces a diversity of accent; and the common people, being a majority, are, on the whole, slowly gaining upon those who are tenacious of Principle No. 1. Hence con'nate in'nate (instead of con'nate and innate) are now sanctioned by several orthoepists. Alcove (for alcov'e) is given by Webster, while con'tents (for conten'te) has the sanction of Walker, and Webster, and Worcester; retail (for retail') is now the marking of a majority of the orthoepists. Detail (for detail') is less prevalent, but is sanctioned by Smart, Clarke, &c. Prolix and pre'text (for proli'x and pret'ext) are not without support. Bombast (for bombast') is the accentuation of Walker, Barclay, Richardson, Webster, and Worcester. Bureau (for bureau') was admitted by Webster and Worcester, and is very generally applied to the article of furniture, while bureau' is used in reference to a department of the government. Access (for access') is authorised by a number of orthoepists, especially the later ones. Smart says, "There is a sort of repugnance to an ultimate accent unless on a verb; hence the uninitiated talk of selling con'sols till they learn on the stock exchange that the technical pronunciation is consols'," i. e., consolidated stocks.

§ 85. We have about eighty cases among our dissyllables in which the same word is used as a verb on the one hand, and a noun or adjective on the other. To distinguish between them, we accent the nouns and adjectives on the first syllable, and the verbs on the last. As the accent on nearly all these words has long been settled by general usage, it is unnecessary to give the list in full; but the following may be offered to illustrate the principle:—

Nouns or Adjectives.	Verbs.
Ab'ject.	Ab'ject'.
Ac'cent.	Ac-cent'.
Aug'ment.	Aug-ment'.
Bom'bard.	Bom-bard'.
Con'cert.	Con-cert'.
Con'duct.	Con-duct'.
Dis'count.	Dis-count'.
Ex'port.	Ex-port'.
Fer'ment.	Fer-ment'.
Fre'quent.	Fre-quent'.

Nouns or Adjectives.

Im'port.
In'cessa.
Ob'ject.
Par'fume.
Reb'el.
Re'cord.
Sub'ject.
Tor'ment.
Up'start.

Verbs.

Im'port'.
In'cessa'.
Ob'ject'.
Par'fume'.
Re-b'el'.
Re-cord'.
Sub'ject'.
Tor-ment'.
Up-start'.

A considerable number of trisyllables are also accented on the first syllable when nouns, and on the last when verbs; for example:—

Nouns.

Coun'tercharm.
In'terchange.
O'vercharge.
Repr'imand.

Verbs.

Countercharm'.
Interchange'.
Overcharge'.
Reprimand'.

and many other words, when similarly employed, follow the same analogy, as at'tribute, attri'bute.

§ 86. We have a few dissyllables which are at once nouns and adjectives. These are distinguished by accenting the nouns on the first syllable and the adjectives on the last.

Nouns

Aug'ust, the month.
Com'pact, an engagement.
Ex'ile, banishment.
In'stinct, an impulse.
Min'ute, of time.
Su'pine, in grammar.

Adjectives.

August', noble.
Compact', close.
Exile', slender.
Instinct', filled with.
Minute', small.
Supine', indolent.

The word gallant, however, when it denotes a suitor, or "attentive to females," is accented gallant', and is changed into gal'lant when it means high-spirited or daring.

TRISYLLABLES AND POLTSYLLABLES.

§ 87. FOURTH PRINCIPLE.—In words of three or more syllables, there is a strong tendency to accent the antepenult, or third syllable from the end, as in elo'quent, ac'cident, oppor'tunity, &c.

NOTE.—This tendency is counteracted by that of derivation; and here arises another "conflict," which, to some extent, arrays our scholars on the one side, and the body of the people on the other. Every scholar, for example, is strongly inclined to say con'tem'plate, demon'strate, confis'cate, obdu'rate, &c., according to the accent of the Latin; while the mass of the people and others who are governed by English analogies, are equally bent on saying con'tem'plais, demon'strats, ob'durats, &c. The latter pronunciation is now very extensively heard, and thus we have a "divided usage" in respect to these and similar words. In like manner, bal'cony (for baleo'ny) is now, according to Smart, becoming the true English pronunciation, and is so marked by Knowles, Webster, and many more.

§ 88. There is a number of words which once took the antepenultimate accent, but which are now reverting to an accent on the penult. For example, concord'ance (not con'cordance) is now the settled pronunciation, and so trib'nal (not trib'nal); in'quiry (not in'quiry); quint'es'sence (not quint'essence); oppo'nent (not op'ponent); expo'nent (not ex'ponent); compo'nent (not com'ponent); commi'ttee (not com'mi'ttee), &c.

§ 89. It is a just principle, laid down by Walker, that "when words come to us whole from the Greek, or Latin, the same accent ought to be preserved as in the original." Hence the following words ought to be accented as here marked, viz., Abdo'men, hori'zon, deco'rum, deco'rous, sono'rous, acou'men bitu'men, Panthe'on, and, on like grounds, pias'sa, farr'o, and others.

§ 90. TERMINATIONS IN eo.—Terminations in eo have their accent on the penult, as epide'm'ic, scen'tific, &c. The following words are exceptions, having the accent on the antepenult, viz.: or'asie, arist'atic, biolo'gic, cath'olic, chol'eric, sphem'eric, her'etic, in'natie, pleth'oric, pol'itic, rhet'oric, and tur'meric. Olimactic has usually the antepenultimate accent, though some, as Knowles and Smart, pronounce it olimactic'ic. In like manner, empiric, splen'etic, phlegmatic, and pleth'oric are sometimes accented on the penult and sometimes on the antepenult.

§ 91. TERMINATIONS IN ean.—A part of these terminations follow the English analogy, and take the antepenultimate accent, as ceru'lean, hyperbo'rean, Hercu'lean, Mediterra'nean, subterra'nean, Tartar'ean, marmo'rean. A part accent the penult, as adama'te'an, Atlanti'ean, colosse'an, empyre'an, Epicure'an, Europe'an, hymen'al, Pygme'an. Orphe'an, being derived from Or'pheus, is more properly accented Or'phean, although Knowles and Smart prefer the former.

§ 92. Words ending in tude, essy, ify, ety, ity, graphy, logy, loquy, athy, metry, tohy, metry, gonal, fluency, lucency, and porous, have the accent on the antepenult; as forti'tude, diver'sify, liberal'ity, geology, baro'meter, ovip'orous, &c.

§ 93. Words of three or more syllables, ending in ulous, inows, erous, and orows, are accented on the antepenult; as, sed'ulous, vol'u'minous, wool'ferous, gramini'vorous; but canorous and sonorous form exceptions.

§ 94. Words of three or more syllables, ending in ative, are accented on the antepenult; as, appel'lative, commu'native, spec'ulative; but creat'ive, collat'ive, and dela'tive must be excepted.

§ 95. Words in tive preceded by a consonant, have the accent in the penult: as attract'ive, vindict'ive, construct'ive, insect'ive, but substantive and adjective are irregular.

§ 96. There is much diversity of practice among orthoepists with respect to adjectives ending in ose: Walker observes that, "from the decided prevalence of the accent on the last syllable of those words, we may easily guess at the analogy of pronunciation." Smart, however, the "remodeller of Walker," places the accent on the antepenult of a great many of this class of words; and hence we may infer, that the place of the primary accent has not been determined, and that it is of little consequence whether we say adi'p'ose or adi'p'ose, an'hel'ose or an'hel'ose, op'e'rose or op'e'rose.

§ 97. There is a class of legal terms ending in or and ee, which, when used correlatively, place the accent on the last syllable, evidently with the view of more clearly marking the contrast, thus:—appellor, appellee; donor, donee; grantor, grantee; legator, legatee; obligor, obligee, and a few more of a similar nature; but when some of these words are used separately, the accent is brought backward, as in do'nor, &c.

The same principle of contrast affects the seat of the accent in many other words, thus:—"He must in'crease, but I must de'crease;" the charge is not in'clusive, but ex'clusive of extra hours.

§ 98. Those botanical adjectives, ending in phyllous, might naturally be expected to be similarly accented, and yet several orthoepists neutralize their authority by placing the accent on the penult of some and on the antepenult of others; but, upon the whole, the preponderance of authority is in favour of the antepenult, which is certainly most in accordance with the genius of the language; thus:—heteroph'y'llous, macroph'y'llous, monoph'y'llous, rhizoph'y'llous, &c.

ORTHOGRAPHY

AS EXHIBITED IN THIS DICTIONARY.

It is in this department that we have deviated farthest from Dr. Webster. Like some other lexicographers, he laboured to bring the orthography of many exceptional words into conformity to that of many others of similar form or derivation; but, although his practice has been extensively followed in America, it has not met with much favour in this country. As we consider the duty of the lexicographer not so much to reform the orthography of a language as to reflect its condition from the pages of the current literature of his time; so we have endeavoured in this work to exhibit that orthography which prevails in the standard works of the present day. The following remarks, however, will shew the principles of our present practice with the more remarkable exceptions, as well as indicate what many think desirable to be accomplished in English orthography.

1. Terminations in our. Dr. Webster, in such words as favour, labour, &c., has dropped the u; but, in conformity to present usage in Britain, it has been retained in this work; although, in time, these words will be brought into conformity to many similar words in which the u has been already dropped.

2. Terminations in c and ck. In all monosyllables, as sick, stick, the c is followed by k, and hence, in their compounds, as candle-stick, &c. Words of more than one syllable, ending in ic, or iak, which ended in k in the days of Johnson, have dropped the k, as in music, maniac, &c. In all other terminations the k is retained as in errack. In a few derivatives, however, to prevent the mistake of making c soft, the k is retained, as in trafficking, mimicking.

3. Terminations in re. Dr. Webster has endeavoured to bring about twenty words ending in re, as centre, metre, into conformity to many others, such as chamber, cider, diameter, by spelling them center, meter, &c.; but even in his hands acre, massacre, lucre, and egre have proved refractory, and the practice has not been generally followed, although, in some of our recent Dictionaries, many of these words are spelled both ways.

4. On doubling the Final Consonant.—It is a rule extending to many hundreds of cases, that, when a word ends in a single consonant, preceded by a single vowel, with the accent on the last syllable, the final consonant is doubled when the common formatives ing, ed, er, are added to the word, as forget, forgetting; blot, blotted; begin, beginner; but if a diphthong precedes the final consonant, or if the accent is on any syllable but the last, the consonant commonly remains single, as load, loaded; toil, toiling; offer, offering. There are many verbs, however, especially such as end in t, that form exceptions to this rule, apparently from the fear of leading to a mispronunciation of the vowel next the final consonant; thus, less, lessing; pencil, pencilled; model, modeller; travel, traveller. Lowth, Walker, and others have recommended these words to be brought into conformity to the general rule; this has been done by Dr. Webster, but in this work we have spelled them according to the prevailing practice, although there is a considerable number of words of similar termination that conform to the general rule, as barrel, burrowing; bigot, bigoted; drivel, drivelled, driveling, but, inconstantly, driveller. Hence in words ending in t, p, and f, usage is by no means settled.

5. Distinction between Verbs in ise and ise.—Verbs from the Greek ισω, and others formed analogously to them, have the termination ise, as heptise, legalise, &c. Catechise and sorcise are exceptions. Verbs, derived directly from the French -iser, and also some nouns, with a few from other sources, end in ise, as advertise, advice, affranchise, chastise, circumise, comprise, criticise. There is a general tendency, however, among printers at present to dispense as far as possible with s in these terminations in which it was formerly used.

6. Terminations in able.—Able, when incorporated into words ending with silent s, cuts it off, as in blamable, except after c or g, as in noticeable, changeable, lest they should be sounded hard.

7. Defense, offense, and pretense.—In these words s is considered by many preferable to c on the ground of analogy. Originally the following words were spelt thus: expence, recompence, suspence, but have, within comparatively a short period, changed the c into s, for two reasons, viz., (1.), they are derived from Latin words in s, as expensum, &c., and (2.) they have their English derivatives in s, as expensive, &c. The same reasons apply to defense (defensio), with the derivative defensive; offense (offensa), and pretense (pretensum), with the derivatives offensive and pretension. The terms peace and fence, however, are not thus derived, and have no formatives in s.

8. Connection, deflection, inflection, reflection, should follow the spelling of their verbs, connect, &c.

9. Derivatives of dull, skill, will, and full.—It has been suggested that these should retain the ll, to prevent the inconvenience of exceptions to a general rule. Walker says there is no reason why we should not write dullness, fullness, skillful, as well as stiffness, gruffness, &c., but it has not yet been generally done.

10. Derivatives of villain.—The derivatives of villain ought to retain the t, as in villainous, villainy, &c. This is the case in all similar words when the ain is not under the accent, as in mountainous from mountain, captaincy from captain, &c.

11. Woe.—This word takes the final e, like doe, foe, hoe, sloe, toe, and all similar nouns of one syllable. The termination in e belongs, among monosyllables, to the other parts of speech, as go, so, and to nouns of more than one syllable, as motto, potato, &c.

12. Practice, as a Verb.—This verb has been spelled by Dr. Webster like the noun, with a c, as in notice, apprentices, and all similar words in which the accent precedes the last syllable. The distinction of spelling between the noun and verb belongs properly to words accented on the last syllable, as device, n., devise (pronounced de-vize), v. To apply the distinction here, and spell the verb practise, tends, it is said, to give it the same pronunciation (pract-ise). But this spelling, though in opposition to analogy, is still prevalent.

13. Drought and height have now become the established spelling; but drowth and height were formerly used by eminent writers.

14. Some words, pronounced alike, and probably derived from the very same stock, are spelled differently, that they may be more easily distinguished, as stationary (paper, &c.) and stationary (standing); clue (a guide) and clew (a line); ton (a dry measure) and tun (a wet measure or large hoghead); mantel (chimney-piece) and mantle (a kind of cloak); holiday (a secular festival) and holiday (a religious festival); cue (a hint or guide) and queens (a tie of hair), &c.

SYNONYMOUS WORDS

DISCRIMINATED IN THIS VOLUME.

*. The discriminations will be found under the words printed in capitals.

A.

- To ABANDON—to relinquish, forsake, desert, surrender, leave, forego.
ABANDONED—forsaken, deserted, profligate, depraved, corrupt, reprobate.

TO THE SOUNDS OF THE POINTED LETTERS.

* * The Key here is repeated for convenience of reference. Those who use this volume will find themselves greatly aided in this respect to the pronunciation if they will devote a single half hour to a thorough examination of the Remarks on the Key.

VOWELS.

REGULAR LONG AND SHORT SOUNDS.

LONG—Ā ā, as in fame; Ē ē as in metre; Ī ī, as in fine; Ō ō, as in note; Ū ū [Ger. U], as in moon; Ů ů, as in mute; Ȳ ȳ, as in fly.
SHORT—Ā ā, as in fat; Ē ē, as in met; Ī ī, as in fin; Ō ō, as in not; Ō ō (short oo), as in foot; Ū ū, as in but; Ȳ ȳ, as in any.

REGULAR DIPHTHONGAL SOUNDS.

PROPER DIPHTHONG OI or OY (unmarked), as in toil, join, foil, boy, coy, toy.
PROPER DIPHTHONG OW (unmarked), as in now, plow. When irregular, the sound is marked, as in tow, now.
PROPER DIPHTHONG OU (unmarked), as in pound. When irregular, the word is re-spelled, as in route (root).
IMPROPER DIPHTHONGS. In these, the vowel which is sounded is marked, as in dim, clean, cell, people (but this is unnecessary in respect to ee, as in feel). Often they are re-spelled. So also of triphthongs.

PRONUNCIATION.

Respelling for Pronunciation.—(1.) In respelling the French en, on, &c., the letters ng are designed simply to mark the vowel as nasal, and are not to be pronounced themselves.

(2.) The respelling of a word, when a number of related words follow, applies to all of them down to some other word which is respelled.

(3.) Compound words which are not respelled or otherwise marked, are to be pronounced like the simple words of which they are composed; but of and with at the end of compounds, as hereof, herewith, have their final consonantsounded as in dog, smith.

DICTIONARY

A, 2, &c., long.—Ā, 3, &c., short.—CARE, FIRE, LAST, FALL, WHAT; THERE, TERM; MARINE, BIRD; MOVE, DOVE, WOLF, BOOK; RŪLE, BELL; VĪCIOUS.—C as K; G as J; S as Z; CH as SH; THIS.

A is the first letter of the alphabet in most known languages. It is probably the first letter, because it represents the first sound naturally made by the human organs of speech.

A, called the indefinite article, is a contraction of the Anglo-Saxon an, one, and is used before words beginning with a consonant, or long u.

A, as a prefix to many English words, is equivalent to the prepositions in or on, as asleep, afloat; and also when used before participles, as a-hunting, a-begging; but in words derived from the Greek, it signifies privation, or negation; as, amorphous; and in those from the Latin, it denotes separation, as, abstract.

AA-BŌNĪE, } a. Pertaining to Aaron or his LEYDEN-JAR. {ŷ'dn-}. {n. A jar used to electricity, first used at Leyden.

LYA-BLE, n. Exposed to something evil; bound in law or equity; responsible.—Syn. Subject.— liable denotes something external which may befall us; subject refers to evils which arise from internal constitution, and are likely to do so. Hence the former applies more to what is accidental, the latter to things from which we often or inevitably suffer. Every one, from his temperament, is subject to certain diseases, while he is liable to be attacked by many others.

LYA-BLE-NESS, } n. A state of being liable; re-LI-A-BILI-TY, } sponsibility; exposedness; tendency.

LY-BEL-LANT, n. One who libels or brings a libel.

LY-BEL-LER, n. One who defames in writing.

LY-BEL-LOUS, a. Defamatory; scandalous.

LY-BER-AL, a. Having a large and free spirit; not contracted or mean; ample, not literal or narrowly strict, as a liberal construction; embracing elegant culture, as the liberal arts; free to excess.—Syn. Generous.—Liberal is free born, and generous is high born. The former is opposed to the ordinary feelings of a servile state, and implies largeness of spirit in giving, judging, acting, &c. The latter expresses that nobleness of soul which is peculiarly appropriate to those of high rank—a spirit that goes out of self, and finds its enjoyment in consulting the feelings and happiness of others. Generosity is measured by the extent of the sacrifices it makes; liberality by the warmth of feeling which it manifests.

LY-BER-AL, n. One who advocates greater freedom, especially in politics.

LY-BER-AL-ISM, n. Liberal principles.

LY-BER-AL-I-TY, n. Largeness of mind; generous conduct; candour.

LY-BER-TINE, a. Licentious; dissolute.

LY-BER-TIN-ISM, n. Licentiousness of life.

LY-BER-TY, n. Exemption from restraint or compulsion; a privilege or immunity.—Syn. Freedom.—These words, though often interchanged, are distinct in some of their applications. Liberty has reference to previous restraint, freedom to the simple, spontaneous exercise of our powers. A slave is set at liberty; his master had always been in a state of freedom. A prisoner under trial may ask liberty [exemption from restraint] to speak his sentiments with freedom [the spontaneous and bold utterance of his feelings]. The liberty of the press is our great security for freedom of thought.

LY-BIDI-NOUS, a. Eager for venereal pleasures.—Syn. Lustful; Licentious; impure; sensual; lecherous.

LY-BIDI-NOUS-LY, ad. Lustfully; in a lustful manner.

LY-BIDI-NOUS-NESS, n. Inordinate desire for or indulgence in venereal gratification.

LY-CK-RICE (li'ck-ris), n. A balsamic plant and its root; also its extract.

LY-CTOR, n. A Roman officer; a headle.

LYD, n. A cover for a pot, chest, &c.; cover of the eye, or eye-lid.

LYE, n. A false statement intended to deceive.—Syn. Untruth.—A man may state what is untrue from ignorance or misconception, but to say he lies is to charge him with the highest dishonour; hence the word untruth is sometimes used as a softened expression when we do not wish to make the charge of lying in the grossest form.

LYE, v. t. To utter falsehood for the sake of deceiving.

LYE, v. t. [pret. LAY, pp. LAIN] To be at rest in a horizontal position; to stay or remain; to be sustained in law, as an action will lie; to be situated.—Syn. To lay.—Lay is a transitive verb, and has for its preterit laid, as "He told me to lay it down, and I laid it down." Lie is intransitive, and has for its preterit lay, as "He told me to lie down, and I lay down." Some persons blunder by using laid for the preterit of lie, as "He told me to lie down, and I laid down." So persons often say, "The ship laid at anchor," "they laid by during the storm," "the book laid on the shelf," &c. It is only necessary to remember, in all such cases, that laid is the preterit of lay, and not of lie. This would save many respectable writers from a gross error which seems to be increasing among us.

LYEF (loef), ad. With free consent; gladly; willingly; freely.

LYEGE (leeg), n. A sovereign; a vassal; a bound by a feudal tenure; subject; faithful.

LIKEN (līkn), v. t. To make like; to compare.

LIKE'NESS, n. Similarity in appearance or qualities; counterpart; a picture, &c., resembling a person or thing.—SYN. Resemblance; parallel; analogy; portrait; effigy; representation.

LIKEWISE, ad. In like manner; moreover.—SYN. Also; too.—Likewise (like and wise) always signifies (with greater or less obviousness) in like manner. Also (all and so) implies that what is thus subjoined may be said with [all] the same truth and propriety as that which preceded. Too (to) signifies that what follows may be added to what was said before. Hence too gives a slighter and more familiar connection than also, and likewise a more marked one, as in the following sentence: "I may add, too, that there were also others present who likewise shared in the commission of the act."

LICKING, n. Inclination; appetency; appearance of health.

pickle; Indian oress.
- NASTY, a. Disgustingly filthy.—SYN. Wet; filthy; foul; dirty.—Any thing nasty is wet or damp (Ger. nass, wet), and disgusts by its stickiness or odour. Not so with filthy and foul, which imply only that a thing is filled or covered with offensive matter, as filthy clothing, foul vapours, &c. There is a rather peculiar use of this word in calling a rain in fine drops a nasty rain, a day of such rain a nasty day, a sky which portends it a nasty sky, thus retaining the original sense of wet as the leading idea. It is the same with the word dirty, speaking of a dirty rum and a dirty day, &c.; and it is not improbable that this word, like the other, had originally the sense of wet.

- SENTIENT, n. A being or person that has the faculty of perception.
- SENTIMENT, n. A thought prompted by feeling; a direction or tendency of thought given by some passion or disposition of mind, as the sentiment of fear or of hope.—SYN. Opinion; feeling.—An opinion is an intellectual judgment in respect to every kind of truth. Feeling describes those affections of pleasure and pain which spring from the exercise of our sentient and emotional powers. Sentiment (particularly in the plural) lies between them, denoting settled opinions or principles in regard to subjects which interest the feelings strongly, and are presented more or less constantly in practical life. Hence it is more appropriate to speak of our religious sentiments than opinions, unless we mean to exclude all reference to our feelings.
- SENTIMENTAL, a. Abounding in sentiment.—SYN. Romantic.—Sentimental usually describes an error or excess of the sensibilities; romantic, of the imagination. The votary of the former gives indulgence to his sensibilities for the mere luxury of their excitement; the votary of the latter allows his imagination to rove for the pleasure of creating scenes of ideal enjoyment, and gazing on the creations which he has made. One who is sentimental is apt to be laughed at; one who is romantic frequently falls into error.

IN-DUC'TION (-dūk'shun), n. Literally, a bringing in; hence the establishment of some general truth by bringing a sufficiency of cases to prove it [see below]; formal introduction into office, the quiet passing of electricity without open indication of its presence, &c.—SYN. Deduction.

—In induction we observe a sufficient number of facts, and, on the ground of analogy, extend what is true of them to others of the same class, thus arriving at general principles or laws. This is the kind of reasoning employed in physical science. In deduction we begin with a general truth, and seek to connect it with some individual case by means of a "middle term," or class of objects known to be equally connected with both. Thus we bring down the general into the individual, affirming of the latter the distinctive qualities of the former. This is the syllogistic method. By induction Franklin established the identity of lightning with electricity; by deduction he inferred that dwellings might be protected by lightning-rods.

INFECT, v. t. To taint with disease, to contaminate by some secret influence.—Syn. To poison; vitiate; pollute; corrupt.
INFECTION, n. Act of tainting with disease; that which conveys disease by some hidden influence, that which acts by a secret diffusive power, as the injection of evil principles.—Syn. Contagion.—Medical writers in Europe do not, most of them, allow there is any difference between contagion and infection. In America, the distinction referred to under CONTAGION is, to a considerable extent, admitted. In general literature, this distinction is well established. We use contagion and contagious in respect to things which spread by intercourse or imitation, as the contagious influence of example, while we apply infection and infectious to a more hidden and diffusive power, as the injection of vice, the infectious influence of evil principles.
INFECTIOUS (-éks'hus), a. Having power to communicate disease; tending to contaminate by some secret influence, operating by a secret diffusive influence, as joy is infectious.
INFECTIOUSLY, ad. With or by infection.

IN-FI-DIL, n. One who denies the Scriptures and Christianity.—SYN. Unbeliever, free-thinker, deist; atheist, sceptic.—Some have endeavoured to widen the sense of infidel so as to embrace atheism and every form of unbelief, but this has failed. A free-thinker is now only another name for an infidel. An unbeliever is not necessarily a disbeliever or infidel, because he may still be inquiring after evidence to satisfy his mind, the word, however, is more commonly used in the worst sense. A deist believes in one God and a divine providence, but rejects revelation. An atheist denies the being of God. A sceptic is one who has faith in the reliability of evidence is weakened or destroyed, so that religion, to the same extent, has no practical hold on his mind.

JUSTICE, n. The virtue which consists in giving to every one what is his due; impartiality; vindictive retribution; a civil officer or magistrate.—SYN. Equity; law.—Justice and equity are the same; but human laws, though designed to secure justice, are of necessity imperfect, and hence what is strictly legal is at times far from being equitable or just. Here a court of equity comes in to redress the grievance. It does so as distinguished from courts of law; and as the latter are often styled courts of justice, some have fancied that there is in this case a conflict between justice and equity. The real conflict is against the working of the law; this a court of equity brings into accordance with the claims of justice. It would be an unfortunate use of language which should lead any one to imagine he might have justice on his side while practising iniquity (inequity).

TASTE, n. The sense of tasting; the sense by which we perceive the relish of a thing; a correspondent sense of the beautiful; intellectual relish, as a taste for chemistry; a little piece tasted or eaten.—SYN. Sensibility; judgment.—Some consider taste as a mere sensibility, and others as a simple exercise of judgment; but a union of both is requisite to the existence of any thing which deserves the name. An original sense of the beautiful is as necessary to æsthetic judgments as a sense of right and wrong to the formation of just conclusions on moral subjects. But this "sense of the beautiful" is not an arbitrary principle. It is under the guidance of reason; it grows in delicacy and correctness with the progress of the individual and of society; it has its laws in the nature of man; and the development of these laws is the true "standard of taste."

Such, in the better sense of the term is the transcendental philosophy, or transcendentalism. Each of these words has also been used in a bad sense. Empiricism, in this case, is applied to that limited view of knowledge which neglects the truths or principles above referred to and trusts to experience alone. Transcendentalism has been applied to the opposite extreme, which in its depreciation of experience, loses sight of the relation which phenomena sustain to principles. Hence, the term has been applied to a kind of investigation, or a use of language which is vague, obscure, fantastic, or extravagant.
TRANS-CEND-ENTAL-ISM, n. The principles of the transcendental philosophy.

DOWN, WOLF, DOPE; BULL, BYE; Y'GROSS.—3 as K; 4 as J; 5 as S; 6K as SX; 7WH.

as the usage of society; treatment of others.—Syn. Custom.—Custom is the frequent repetition of the same act either by one or many; usage implies practice which is so fully established as to have decisive authority. Hence we speak of usage (not custom) as the law of language.

C'ANCE (y'cance), n. Use or proper employment; interest of money; time given for payment of bills of exchange.

USE (yuse), v. Act of handling or employing; employment; utility; practice; custom; interest.

USE (yuse), v. t. To apply to some valuable service; to consume; to render familiar.—Syn. To employ.—We use a thing when we derive from it some enjoyment or service; we employ it when we turn that service into a particular channel; we use words to express our general meaning; we employ certain technical terms in reference to a given subject.

USEFUL (yuce-), a. Producing or having power to produce good; profitable; serviceable.

USEFUL-LY, ad. With profit or advantage.

USEFUL-NESS, n. Conduciveness to some end, properly to a valuable end; profitableness; utility, which see.

USELESS, a. Having no use; unserviceable; answering no valuable purpose or not the end proposed.—Syn. Fruitless; ineffectual.—We speak of an attempt, &c., as useless when there are in it inherent difficulties which forbid the hope of success; as fruitless when it fails, not from any such difficulties, but from some unexpected hindrance or calamity arising to frustrate it. It is useless to attempt any thing without adequate means; and even when we do possess them, our efforts are often fruitless. Ineffectual nearly resembles fruitless, but implies a failure of a less hopeless character, as, "After several ineffectual efforts, I at last succeeded."

USELESS-LY, ad. Without profit or advantage.

USELESS-NESS, n. Unserviceableness; unfitness for any valuable purpose.

UTIL-ITARI-AN-ISM, n. The doctrine that utility is the end of life and morals.

UTIL-ITY, n. Production of good; profitableness to some valuable end.—Syn. Usefulness.—Usefulness is Saxon, and utility is Latin; and hence the former is used chiefly of things in the concreta, while the latter is employed more in a general and abstract sense. Thus we speak of the utility of an invention, and the usefulness of the thing invented; of the utility of an institution, and the usefulness of an individual. So "beauty and utility" (not usefulness) are brought into comparison. Still, the words are, in many cases, used interchangeably.

UTMOST, a. Being extreme; greatest; highest; n. the most that can be.

UTOPI-A, n. A term invented by Sir Thomas More, from the Greek ou-topos, no place, and applied to an imaginary isle which he represents as enjoying the greatest perfection in politics, laws, &c.; hence, a state of ideal perfection.

UX-ORI-OUS-NESS, n. Connubial dotage; foolish fondness for a wife.

V.

V is the twenty-second letter of our Alphabet, and is a labial articulation. It is nearly allied to F, being formed by the same organs of speech; but V is vocal, or flat, and F is aspirate, or sharp. V was formerly confounded with U, and hence the vowel sound of u and the consonant sound of v were both represented by the same character; of which confusion we have still evidence in the form and name W, which, although double v in shape, is yet called double u. The following line illustrates this practice:—

"For every purpose v using reasons fit." About the beginning of the 16th century, however, they began to be distinguished in printing; but still they may be found indiscriminately distributed in dictionaries. It was not till the beginning of the present century that the practice ceased in schools of teaching the tyro to say vowel u and v, as the distinguishing names of u and v. As a numeral, V represents five, either from its resemblance to the out-spread hand, or to the line drawn diagonally through four units in keeping a tally, with a line over it, thus v, it represents 5000. It has but one sound, as in the words voice, vote, village.

VACAN-CY, n. An empty space; a chasm; destitution of an incumbent; leisure.

WISDOM, n. The right use and exercise of knowledge; sound judgment; piety.—Syn. Prudence. Wisdom has been defined to be "the use of the best means for attaining the best ends," and in this sense implies the union of high mental and moral excellence. Prudence is of a more negative character; it rather consists in avoiding danger than in taking decisive measures for the accomplishment of an object. Burke has remarked that "prudence, when carried too far, degenerates into a "reptile virtue," which is the more dangerous from the plausible appearance it wears.
WISE, a. Properly having knowledge; having wisdom; discreet and judicious in the application of knowledge; knowing or skilled in science, arts, &c.; pious; dictated by or containing wis-

WIT, n. Formerly, mental ability; knowledge; hence, ingenuity in forming some novel combination of ideas, which produces a ludicrous effect; a person having this power.—SYN. Humour.—Wit (Saxon, witnan, to know) formerly meant genius, and now denotes the power of seizing on some thought or occurrence, and, by a sudden turn, presenting it under aspects wholly new and unexpected with a laughable keenness and force. "What I want," said a pompous orator, aiming at his antagonist, "is common sense." "Exactly!" was the whispered reply. The pleasure we find in wit arises from the ingenuity of the turn, the sudden surprise it brings, and the aptness of its application to the case, in the new and ludicrous relations thus flashed upon the view. Humour is a quality more congenial than wit to the British mind. It consists primarily in taking up the peculiarities of a humourist and drawing them out, as Addison did those of Sir Roger de Coverley, so that we enjoy a hearty good-natured laugh at the unconscious development he makes of his whims and oddities. From this original sense the term has been widened to embrace other sources of kindly mirth of the same general character.

Z.

Z, the twenty-sixth and last letter of the English alphabet, is merely a vocal or soft s, and bears the same relation to it that b does to p, d to t, and v to f; the only exception occurs in a few instances in which it follows t, when it has the sharp sound of s, as in valts. The common name was tsard, but zed has been borrowed from the French, and in America it is frequently called see. It begins no Saxon word; the following are consequently of foreign derivation, principally from the Greek. Z, as a numeral, stands for 2000, and with a dash over it for 2,000,000.

SCRIPTURE PROPER NAMES.

REMARKS.

THE pronunciation of Scripture Proper Names is governed chiefly by the rules which prevail in Greek and Latin.

VOWELS.

ACCENTED SYLLABLES.

When these end in a vowel, that vowel has always its long sound, as in Ca'des, Eso'ra, &c. ; when in a consonant, the preceding vowel has the short sound, as in Bas'sa, Cor'ban, &c. But ah has the Italian sound, as in Tuh'pauos, &c.

UNACCENTED SYLLABLES.

When these end in a consonant, their vowel has the short sound, as in Ba'bel, E'bel, E'lim, Bna'tus, &c. When they end in a vowel, the following cases occur: a final has a light Italian sound, as in Du'ra; e, i, and y have the sound of e lightly uttered, as in Di'e-an Au'ti-och, Eu'ty-chus. But i, at the end of words, has its long sound, as in It'a-i. O and u have their long sound lightly uttered, as in Gol'go-tha, Josh'u-a; ai (diphthong) has the long sound of a, as in Ado'nai; u following an accented vowel, has usually the sound of y, as in Isa'iah (I-za'yah). But some in aiah have the accent on the i in a separate syllable, as in Shem-a-i'ah.

CONSONANTS.

C has the sound of s before e, i, and y, as in Ce'phas, Cith'erus, Cyre'ne; of k before a, o, and u, and is marked thus: C e, as in C'ain, Co're, Cu'shuu.

CH has always the sound of k, as in Chalda, Enoch, &c. and, therefore, does not need to have the c marked hard. Rachel has been anglicized, and thus forms an exception.

G has its regular hard sound as in go, gra, as in Gil'ead, &c. In Bethpaze, and one two others, the g has taken the sound of j, by passing through the Greek.

S has its regular sharp sound, as in A'sa, except when marked thus S s, when it has the sound of z, as in Isa'iah (Iza'yah).

N.B.—The pronunciation here given is that of Walker; but in a few instances that of Perry (marked P.), of Fulton and Knight (marked F. & K.), of Trollope (marked T.), of Carr (marked C.), and of Smart (marked S), is subjoined in notes at the bottom of the page.

* Ca'naan.—P.

† Canaan.—This word has sometimes been pronounced in three syllables, with the accent on the second. But Milton, who has used it six times in Paradise Lost, has made it a dissyllable, with the accent on the first.

* The letter s has commonly the sound of s when it comes (in these circumstances) before a liquid, as in dismal, &c. Smart gives the s in Israelites the sound of s, and Worcester marks both words as pronounced with the sound of s.

THE PRONUNCIATION

MODERN GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES,

ACCORDING TO THE SYSTEM OF BALDWIN'S "UNIVERSAL PRONOUNCING GAZETTEER."

ELEMENTS OF THE PRONUNCIATION OF THE PRINCIPAL CONTINENTAL EUROPEAN LANGUAGES.

VOWELS.

1. In the continental languages of Europe, a never has its long English sound, as in the words fate, name, but usually the Italian sound as in far or father, sometimes approximating its short sound i, as in fat.

2. E generally has a sound similar to a in fate, or else to e in met. In French, it is often silent.

3. I usually sounds as in the word marine, i.e. like long e; but it is not unfrequently short, as in pin.

4. O has nearly the same sound as in the English words no, not, and nor, except in Swedish, where it is pronounced like our oo.

5. U is pronounced in most languages like our oo; but in French and Dutch it has a sound intermediate between oo and long e, which can only be learned from an oral instructor.

6. Y is usually pronounced like i, that is, like our e. In Danish, Norwegian, and Swedish, it sounds like the French u; in Dutch it is like our long i.

DIPHTHONGS.

7. Ae in Danish or Norwegian, and ao in Swedish, sound like o.

8. The diphthong oe or o is generally pronounced nearly like our a in fate or e in met. In Dutch ao resembles a in far.

9. Ai and ay are generally sounded like our long i. In French they are similar in sound to our a in fat or ay in day.

10. Au has generally the sound of the English ow, as in now, &c. In French au and eau are pronounced like long o.

11. Ei and ey are generally proper diphthongs, combining the sounds of a in fate and e in me, being similar to ay in day when this word is pronounced very full. In German they are like our long i; in French nearly like our a in fate.

12. Eu In French has a sound similar to u in our word fur, or like u in tub, but more prolonged; in German, eu and ou sound like oi in English.

13. The diphthong ie is usually pronounced like our ee, or e long.

14. Oe or ø occurs in several of the European languages, and is usually pronounced nearly like the French eu, or e in the English word her. Some idea of this sound might be formed by combining the sounds of short u and e (u in nut, and e in bet) thus ûé, and allowing the voice to dwell a little on û. Gothe might be pronounced guh'tt-ah; but the u and e should rather form one long syllable than two short ones; the lips, at the same time, being a little protruded, nearly as in the pronunciation of oo.

15. Oi in French is usually sounded like wôl, or wi. Sometimes, however, it has the sound of ai, or nearly the sound of a in fate.

16. Ou in French is like our oo, in Dutch and Norwegian like ow, or ou in the English word our.

17. Ue or u sounds like the French u.

CONSONANTS.

The consonants in the continental languages of Europe are generally similar in sound to the same letters in English. The following exceptions may be mentioned:—

18. B, at the end of a word in German, is pronounced like p; between two vowels in Spanish its sound is somewhat similar to v.

19. C, before e and i in Italian, is pronounced like ch in the English word chill; in the same position in Spanish, it sounds like the Spanish s, or like our th in this (except in the Catalan dialect, where it has the sound of s). In German, c before e, i, and y, is pronounced like the German s, or like ts in English. In Polish it has the same sound, even at the end of a word, thus, Prync is pronounced prîp'ets.

20. D, at the end of a word in German and Dutch, is pronounced like t. In Spanish and Danish, between two vowels or at the end of a word it has a sound similar to th in this.

21. In all the European languages g is hard before a, o, and u; in German, Danish, Norwegian, and Polish, it is hard in every situation, though it sometimes has a guttural sound. Before e and i (or y), in French, Portuguese, Spanish, and Swedish, it is like the j of these languages. In the same position in Italian, it sounds like our j or soft g. In Dutch it is always pronounced like h strongly aspirated. Gn before e and i, in French, Portuguese, and Spanish, sounds like g hard.

22. H, in French, Spanish, Italian, and Portuguese, is either never pronounced at all, or else is sounded so slightly that an English ear can scarcely perceive it. In the other languages of Europe it has the same sound as in English.

23. J, in Italian, German, Polish, Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, and Dutch, is pronounced like our y. In French and Portuguese it has the sound of sh, or s in the English word pleasure. In Spanish it is equivalent to s, being similar in sound to a strongly-aspirated h.

24. M and n, at the end of a syllable in French and Portuguese, often have a nasal sound, similar to our ng. For example, bon in French is pronounced almost bong; alem or alen, in Portuguese, is sounded like aleng. In pronouncing the nasal m and n in French, care should be taken not to produce the ringing sound of the English termination ng.

25. N in Spanish (like nh in Portuguese and gn in French and Italian) has the sound of ny; Mño and Mño are pronounced alike, men'yo. (See 34.)

26. Qu, before e and i in Portuguese and Spanish, and before every vowel in French, has the sound of k.

27. R, in most European languages, is trilled more strongly than in English, particularly at the end of a word or syllable.

28. S, in many European tongues, when between two vowels, is very soft, having almost the sound of our s. In German it is often so pronounced at the beginning of a syllable. In Hungarian it sounds like ours or the German sch.

29. W, in German and some other languages, is nearly similar to our v.

30. X in Spanish generally sounds like a strongly-aspirated h. (See 23.) In Portuguese it is pronounced like our sh.

31. Z, in German and Swedish, has the sound of ts; in Italian, z usually sounds like ds, ss like ts.

COMBINED CONSONANTS.

32. Ch in Spanish has the same sound as in the English word chill (except in the dialect of Catalonia, where it sounds like k). In Italian it is pronounced like k; in German, Polish, and some other languages, it has a guttural sound somewhat similar to a strongly-aspirated h. In French (except in the case of some words derived from the Greek) and in Portuguese, ch has the sound of our sh.

33. Gh in Italian is like our g hard.

34. Gn, in French and Italian (like h in Spanish) combines the sounds of n and y consonant. (See 23.)

35. Lh in Portuguese, and ll in Spanish, sound like our ly: e. g. relho is pronounced vel'yo; villa veel'ya; llano, lye'no.

36. Nh in Portuguese is pronounced like the Spanish ñ. (See 25 and 34.)

37. Sz, in Hungarian and German, is sounded like sharp s or ss.

38. Sch in German is pronounced like sh in English; in Dutch, however, sch has a sound similar to our sk.

39. Th, in all the continental European languages except Greek (in which the character θ has the same sound as our th), is pronounced like simple t.

REMARKS.

I, in French and some other languages, often has a sound intermediate between our ee and short i: vile might be pronounced in English vill or veel. O in on nasal should be pronounced like o in no or note, but not so long. In marking the pronunciation of foreign names, we have usually preferred to use ä, e (as é) and ö, rather than ä ë ï ö as the speaker would be in danger of prolonging the sounds of the latter too much. E (not marked with an accent) in French is usually silent; and it is occasionally so in Danish and German.

In pronouncing French words or names, the accent should be placed nearly equally on all the syllables, but the principal accent should usually fall on the last.

A double letter in foreign words is to be sounded more distinctly and fully than a single letter of the same kind.

EXPLANATION OF THE ABBREVIATIONS AND SIGNS USED TO INDICATE THE PRONUNCIATION, &c.

Arab. Arabic.	Port. Portuguese.
Dan. Danish.	pron. pronunciation.
Flem. Flemish.	Russ. Russian.

The vowels a, e, i, o, marked with a point underneath, have an obscure sound similar to short u: thus, Mårton should be pronounced mår'tün or mår'tün.

ä is employed to denote the long sound of ä.

ä is broad, having a sound similar to o in not.

ö has a sound similar to e in her (see 14);* it may be Anglicised by e.

ä is like the French u (see 5),* which it is employed in pronunciation to represent; it may be Anglicised by the English u.

u, small capital, is intended to represent the sound of the French eu (see 13);* it should be pronounced like u in the English word fur.

n, small capital, is intended to represent a sound similar to ñ in this. (See 30.)*

c and x, small capitals, indicate the sound of the German ch, or one similar to it. (See 32.)*

x, small capital, has a sound somewhat similar to the preceding, but more resembling a strongly-aspirated h.

l (liquid) is to be pronounced like li in million; it blends the sound of l and y consonant.

x and n, small capitals, and ng, are used to represent the nasal sound in French, being similar in sound to ng. (See 24.)*

ñ is pronounced like ni in million; it blends the sounds of n and y consonant. (See 25 and 34.)*

z, small capital, has the sound of zz in terror. (See 27.)*

w (small capital) has a sound similar to our v. y and ey, at the end of an unaccented syllable, sound like e in me.

ai and ay, are considered to be equivalent to a in fate.

au and ow have the sound of a in fall.

ss indicates a sound similar to t in the first syllable of spirit.

ow is to be pronounced like ow in cow or ow in hour.

gh is employed in pronunciation for g hard. ss is sometimes used to mark the sharp sound of s.

* These figures refer to the elements of Pronunciation given above.

ADDITIONAL OBSERVATIONS

PROPER PRONUNCIATION OF FOREIGN NAMES.

1. EVERY letter or combination of letters occurring in the pronunciation of a word or name is to be pronounced with its proper English sound; e. g. ch is to be sounded as in chill, g as in get; &c. From not attending to this simple and obvious rule, many persons fail to pronounce names correctly, even while they have the pronunciation clearly and accurately marked before their eyes. Thus, we have given Che-wá-wá as the pronunciation of Chihuahua; many, however, with this pronunciation before them, have called it she-wá-wá, not considering that if such had been the true sound, we should have written it with sh. Chapala is in like manner most improperly pronounced shá-pá-lá. All persons desirous of speaking correctly, should carefully guard against this most vicious pronunciation.

In connection with this subject, it may be observed that, in names where the pronunciation is not repeated, ou and ow, if not otherwise marked, are to be sounded as in our and now; a vowel followed by a consonant ending the syllable, if not marked long, is to be pronounced short, &c.

2. In the pronunciation of foreign names, particular care should be taken not to allow á to fall into the third or broad sound of this vowel—an error to which English and American speakers are very prone; it would be far better, generally speaking, to pronounce it like a in fat. It may be observed, however, that a before a nasal in French is usually broad, almost like ou in not. We have accordingly represented an nasal by ou or ón.

3. In pronouncing French words containing an nasal, the speaker should be careful not to give it its short sound, since this is not only incorrect, but is liable to confound the word with others entirely different in spelling and signification. By this faulty pronunciation bon (good) is sounded like ban (ban or exile); bon should be pronounced bón—almost bóng. Toulon should either be entirely Anglicised (as too'lun), or else pronounced too'lón—almost too'lóng. For the same reasons, ou in names not Anglicised should have its distinct sound, like our in far, and not be confounded with the French ou or u. There is no sufficient reason why the French names Droux (druh) and Drouz (droo), Leurs (lur) and Lurs (lur), should not be distinguished from each other in pronunciation, as well as our words groom and groom, cure and cure.

4. In the pronunciation of foreign names, the speaker should be careful to pronounce all vowels, whether in an accented or unaccented syllable, distinctly, if they are not expressly marked as obscure.

5. Y in the middle of a syllable, or at the end of an accented syllable, is like i; at the end of an unaccented syllable, like e.

6. When h (not small capital) occurs at the end of a syllable in the pronunciation of a name, it is not to be sounded. It is employed to enable the learner more readily to pronounce the preceding vowel short, as druh, &c.

7. Ah is employed in this Vocabulary to denote a sound intermediate between á and a, but more resembling the latter, as al-a-bah'ma, oo-lo-rah'do. The speaker should be very careful not to pronounce the penultimate a in these names like that in far or father.

8. An acute accent (') is used to mark the primary accent of a name; a grave (`) to mark the secondary accent; e. g. Fa'sá-má-quod'dy.

9. It is to be observed that the number of syllables in the names of this Vocabulary is to be determined by the accents or hyphens: thus, ioe'lá-ben, the pronunciation of Eisleben, has three syllables, not four, the e in the first syllable (ioe) being silent; dnys'ter, the Russian pronunciation of Diaster, must be pronounced not án-es'ter but dñes'ter, the ny being employed to indicate the sound of the Spanish ñ, in other words, that of n in mignon.

10. An Italic letter in the spelling of a name is silent: thus, Jes'samine is to be pronounced as if written Jes'ammin.

11. The abbreviation syn. ("synonymous with") indicates that the name to which it is affixed is either simply another spelling of the name referred to, or that it designates the same place.

Different modes are sometimes made use of in order to indicate the same sound: thus, i long followed by a sharp may be represented by iss or ioe,—we have in the pronunciation of Eisleben, preferred using ioe, as being simpler for the common reader. In a multitude of cases it obviously makes but little difference whether we select one or another of several modes: Trenton, for example, may be pronounced tren'tun, tren'tow, tren'ten, or tren't'n, the point being to show that the sound of o in the unaccented syllable is very short and indistinct—in fact almost silent.

. The reader may observe that, in this part of our work, we have not followed the method of marking the pronunciation adopted in the foregoing part of the Dictionary. The adoption of a different system of notation was necessary, in order, as far as possible, to represent all the variety of sounds in the different European languages; and, as we have freely used the materials of Baldwin's "Universal Pronouncing Gazetteer," so the system of marking the sounds of the letters that we have adopted, is essentially the same as that employed in that important work. It may also be remarked that the second or Italian sound of a (which occurs in the pronunciation of foreign names far more frequently than any other vowel sound) is represented in the Dictionary by á. To this character there cannot be the slightest objection when we wish to mark the sounds of English words only. It is, however, far otherwise with regard to foreign names, in which this very character (á) almost always has the sound of á and é, and never that of a.

Né-re-ids, Nymphs of the sea.

Nes'-sus, A celebrated Centaur, whose tunic, rendered poisonous by the blood that flowed from his wounds, caused the death of Hercules.

Nes'-tor, The son of Neleus and Chloris, one of the most perfect characters in Homer's Odyssey, distinguished for his wisdom and virtues.

NÍ-o-bé, The daughter of Tamalus, who wept herself into a stone, through grief at the death of her children.

O-e-ú'-si-a, The goddess of opportunity, feigned to have one lock of hair on her forehead, by which she must be seized, if at all.

O-ó'-a-nus, The most ancient god of the sea, and father of the nymphs presiding over springs and rivers.

Œd'-ip-us, A king of Thebes who solved the riddle of the Sphinx, unwittingly killed his father, married his mother, and afterward ran mad, and tore out his own eyes.

Om'-pha-lé, A queen of Lydia, for love of whom Hercules became a slave, exchanged his club for a spindle and ulster, and suffered himself to be beaten with her slipper.

Ops, A name of Cybele.

O-ré'-a-dés, (O're-ade) Nymphs of the mountains who accompanied Diana in hunting.

Or'-phe-us, A poet, musician, and philosopher, whose skill in music was fabled to have moved the very rocks and trees.

Or'-ion, A celebrated hunter, changed after death into the constellation of the same name.

O-sí'-ris, The son of Jupiter and Niole, who first taught the Egyptians husbandry, and was worshipped by them under the form of an ox, called Apis.

Os'-sa, A lofty mountain of Thessaly, once the residence of the Centaurs. It was one of the mountains which the giants, in their wars against the gods, heaped on one another to mount into heaven.

Pæ'-an, A name of Apollo.

Pæ'-tó-lus, A celebrated river of Lydia, in which Midas washed himself when his touch turned every thing to gold, and from this it ever after rolled golden sands.

Pá'-les, The goddess of husbandry and feeding cattle.

Pál'-lá-di-un, A wooden image of Pallas, on the possession of which the security of Troy was supposed to depend. It was stolen from Troy by Ulysses and Diomedes.

Pan, The god of shepherds, hunters, and country sports.

Pan-dó-ra, The first created female, endowed by Venus with beauty, and presented by Jupiter with a box, containing all kinds of misfortunes, which she, through curiosity, let loose upon the world; only hope remaining at the bottom of the box.

Par'-es, The poetical Fates.

Par'-is, The son of Priam, king of Troy. He decided the contest of beauty between Juno, Pallas, and Venus, in favour of the latter; who, in return, enabled him to carry off Helen. This act occasioned the Trojan war.

Par'-then'-o-pé, A Syren who drowned herself because she could not, by the sweetness of her voice, shipwreck Ulysses.

Peg'-a-us, A winged steed, the favourite of the muses and Apollo.

Pe'-a-tés, Household gods, differing from the Lares, who were of human origin.

- Pe-naï'o-pé, the wife of Ulysses, who, being pressed by suitors during his absence, made them promise to delay until she finished a web which she was then weaving, and of which she unravelled at night, what she wove by day.
- Per'dix, The nephew of Dædalus, thrown from a tower by his uncle, and changed into a partridge.
- Phæ-ton, the son of Phœbus and Clymene, who obtained from his father permission to drive his chariot for a single day; but, being unable to manage the fiery steeds, was hurled by Jupiter into the river Eridanus, to prevent a general conflagration.
- Phi-lo-mé'le, Daughter of Pandion, king of Athens. She was changed into a nightingale.
- Phin'e-us, A king of Thrace, who, having blinded and imprisoned his children on a false accusation, was himself struck blind and tormented by the Harpies.
- Phle'gy-as, A king of the Lapithæ, who, having burnt the temple of Apollo, was placed in hell under a great stone, apparently about to fall at every moment.
- Pho'bus, A title of Apollo, as god of the sun.
- Phœnix, A fabulous bird, mentioned by Herodotus as appearing but once in five hundred years.
- Pi-er-i-dæ, Name for the Muses; also the daughters of Pierius, changed by the Muses into magpies for challenging them to sing.
- Ple'i-a-dæ or Ple-i'a-des, The seven daughters of Atlas and Pleione, transformed into the constellation of that name.
- Plu'to, The god of Hades.
- Plu'tus, The god of wealth, represented as lame in his approach, but winged in his departure.
- Pol-y-hym'ni-a, The muse who presided over singing and rhetoric.
- Pol-y-phé-mus, A giant who had but one eye, in the middle of his forehead, which Ulysses burnt out with a firebrand, having first made him drunk.
- Po-mô'næ, The goddess of orchards and fruits.
- Pri'am, The last king of Troy, the father of Hector, Paris, &c.
- Pro-crus'tes, A savage robber, who placed his captives on a couch, and, if too short, stretched them out, but, if too long, lopped them to fit it.
- Pro-mé'the-us, The son of Iapetus who, having stolen fire from heaven, was bound fast on mount Caucasus and tormented by a vulture, which fed continually upon his liver.
- Proser-pine, The wife of Pluto and queen of Hell.
- Pro'te-us, One of the gods of the sea, who foretold future events, and possessed the power of transforming himself into various shapes.
- Pry'phé, A nymph beloved by Cupid. She was made immortal by Jupiter.
- Pry'nus, Son of Achilles, and, like his father, cruel and vindictive. He distinguished himself at the siege of Troy.
- Py'thon, A huge serpent, killed by Apollo, who instituted the Pythian games in commemoration of the event.
- Quad'ri-frons, Janus, when represented with four faces.
- Quin-qu'i'tri-a, A festival in honour of Minerva.
- Quir-i-ni'is, One of the hills of Rome; also a gate of the city.
- Qui-r'i-nus, A surname of Mars among the Romans.
- Rax-s'na, A Persian woman taken prisoner by Alexander, who became enamoured of her and married her.
- Rémus, The brother of Romulus, exposed together with him by the cruelty of his grandfather.
- Rhad'a-man'thus, A law-giver of Crete, famous for his justice and equity; whence he is represented as one of the judges in the lower world.
- Rhe'a Sil'vi-a, The mother of Romulus and Remus.
- Rhod'o-pé, A mountain in Thrace, covered all the year with snow.
- Rom'u-lus, The son of Mars and Rhea Silvia. He was the founder and first king of Rome.
- Ros'cius, A Roman actor of great celebrity.
- Ru'bi-con, A small river that separated Italy and Gaul. Julius Cæsar, by crossing it began the civil wars of his time.
- Ru-bi'go, A goddess at Rome, particularly worshipped by husbandmen, as she presided over corn.
- Sa'ti-i, Priests of Mars; twelve in number.
- Sal-mô-ne-us, A king of Elis, struck by lightning for imitating the thunder of Jove.
- Sar-dan-a-pâ'us, The last king of Syria, whose subjects revolted on account of his effeminacy.
- Sat'urn, The father of Jupiter, who, when banished from the throne of heaven by his son, fled for safety into Italy, and taught the people agriculture and the useful arts. The time in which he did this is called The Golden Age.
- Sat-ur-nâ-li-a, Feasts in honour of Saturn, in which great licence was allowed, and slaves were on an equal footing with their masters.
- Sem'e-lé, The mother of Bacchus.
- Sem-mi'a-mis, The celebrated Queen of Assyria, who built the walls of Babylon.
- Se'wus, The foster-father of Bacchus; hideously deformed and addicted to drunkenness, but regarded as the god of abstruse mysteries and knowledge.
- Sis'y-phus, A noted robber, who, for his crimes, was condemned in hell to roll to the top of a hill a huge stone, which constantly fell back upon him.
- Som'nus, The son of Erebus and Nor, the god of Sleep.
- Sphinx, A fabulous monster which put out riddles and devoured all who were unable to solve them; killing herself when Oedipus solved one proposed to him.
- Styx, A poisonous stream on the borders of hell, by which the gods swore their most solemn oaths.
- Syl-vâ'nus, A Roman deity who presided over fields and cattle.
- Tan'ta-lus, A king of Lydia, who, for his misdeeds, was placed in a lake of water which receded whenever he attempted to drink; and surrounded with all manner of delicious fruits, which always eluded his grasp.
- Tar'ta-rus, The fabled place of punishment in the lower world.
- Te-lem'chus, the only son of Ulysses and Penelope.
- Tel'us, The most ancient of all the gods after Chaos. She is honoured under the various names of Cybele, Ceres, &c., and is represented as a woman with many breasts distended with milk, to denote the fertility of the earth.
- Tem'pe, A valley of Thessaly, described by the poets as the most delightful spot on the earth.
- Ter'mi-nus, A divinity at Rome, who was supposed to preside over bounds and limits, and to punish all unlawful usurpations of land.
- Terp-sich'o-ré, The Muse who presided over dancing.
- Tha-l'a, One of the Muses, who was the patroness of comedy.
- Thê-se-us, or Thê-seus, King of Athens, and one of the most famous heroes of antiquity.
- Ti'tan, The son of Cœlus and Vesta or Terra, who dethroned his brother Saturn and kept him imprisoned until released by his son Jupiter.
- Tri'ton, The son of Neptune, and his trumpeter.
- Trô'i-lus, Son of Priam and Hecuba.
- Tyn-dar'i-dæ, Sons of Tyndarus, viz., Castor and Pollux.
- U-lys'ses, The son of Laërtes; the most eloquent, wise, and politic leader of the Greeks in the Trojan war.
- U-râ-ni-a, The Muse who presides over astronomy.

A CONCISE ACCOUNT OF THE HEATHEN DEITIES, HEROES, ETC. 619

U'ra-nus, the most ancient of the gods.

Va-cu'na, The goddess of rest and ease.

Ve'nus, The goddess of love, gracefulness, beauty, and mirth.

Ver-tum'nus, A deity presiding over the seasons particularly Spring.

Ves'ta, A goddess, who, like the Greek Hestia, presided over the public and private hearth. Her temple contained a sacred fire, tended by virgins, and never permitted to go out.

Val'ean, The son of Jupiter and Juno, who, with the Cyclops, forged the thunderbolts of Jove. He was the god of fire, and presided over workers in metal.

Xan'tho, A sea-nymph.

Xan'thus, The Scamander, so called among the gods.

Xan-tip'pe, The wife of Socrates, remarkable for her ill-humour and peevishness.

Zeph'y-rus, One of the winds, and son of Astræus and Aurora.

Ze'tës, Son of Boreas and Orith-nia, and brother to Calais, together with whom he pursued the Harpies.

Ze'thus, the son of Jupiter and Antiope, very expert in music.

Zelus, A name of Jupiter.

LIST OF WORDS OF DOUBTFUL OR VARIOUS ORTHOGRAPHY.

The orthography in the left-hand column is deemed to be well authorized, and in most cases preferable; but with respect to the authority of that in the right-hand column, there is great diversity. In some cases it is nearly or quite as well authorized as that on the left hand, and in some it has but very feeble support. Both orthographies of some of the words are right, the words being differently spelt when used in different senses; as, draught or draft, subtle or subtile, abetter or abettor, canvass or canvas, caliber or calibre, caster or castor, controller or comptroller, &c.

THE PREPOSITION.

PREPOSITIONS show the relations between words, and are generally placed before nouns and pronouns in the objective case.

There are many nouns, adjectives, verbs, and participles, which are followed by their appropriate prepositions; and there are instances in which it is a matter of some difficulty to determine what preposition is most suitable to be used.

A LIST OF WORDS WITH THE PROPER PREPOSITION ANNEXED.

THE ORIGIN AND PROGRESS OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

After having combined, in this Dictionary, the orthography, orthoepy, and definition of the principal words of the English language, as it exists at the present time, we shall now endeavour to give those who have not access to any of the elaborate works that have been produced on the subject, a brief account of the derivation and progress of that comprehensive and wide spread tongue.

As the history of the earliest inhabitants of Britain must be deciphered from their stone weapons and implements, the circles of upright stones in which they met for council or religion, and the rude urns in which their ashes were collected and placed beneath the sepulchral cairn, it is not to be expected that we should be certain of their language, nor could such a people be supposed to have a native literature. The Phœnicians, however, traded with them long before the Roman invasion, and the British Islands were known to the ancient Greeks as the Cassiterides or Tin Islands. When Julius Cæsar landed on the shores of Britain, about fifty-five years before the Christian era, he was confronted by a bold and hardy race, who bravely contested every foot of ground that his veteran legions temporarily obtained. It is not the appearance, the manners, or the government of these bold Britons, however, with which we are now concerned; but we eagerly turn to any information we can obtain concerning their language or literature. It is to the commentaries of Cæsar that we are principally indebted for any information we possess on these points.

The earliest inhabitants of Britain appear to have belonged to that great family, whose main branches, known as Celts, spread themselves extensively over middle and western Europe. They were probably identical with the Cimmerians or Cimbri, who, on being expelled from the north of the Euxine found new settlements near the Baltic and the mouth of the Elbe. Pressed forward by the advancing wave of emigration, the Celts crossed from the neighbouring country of Gaul into Britain; and, at a later period, were driven into the inland parts of their own country by an invasion of Belgæ, a branch of the great Teutonic family. Their men of learning were their Druids, or priests, who did not commit their mysteries to writing, but communicated them to their disciples in verses, which they were occupied for many years in committing to memory; but at this early period Cæsar found them using the Greek characters in the record of other matters. During the time that the Romans held an insecure dominion in Britain, the Roman language would be used in administrative and probably in judicial proceedings; those who were of mixed blood, and natives advanced to any civil employment, must have become acquainted with the Roman language and laws; and, as the introduction of Christianity belongs to this period, this implies the more extensive employment of the Greek language, and thus we may perceive how some of those elements were introduced that contributed to the formation of the language of Britain. We shall therefore here present the Lord's Prayer in each of the languages that may have contributed most to the formation of the English:—

LATIN.

From the version made by St. Jerome in the latter part of the fourth century—the “Vulgate”—as edited by Tischendorf in his “Novum Testamentum Triglottum,” Leipsic, 1854.

Pater noster qui es in caelis, sanctificetur nomen tuum,
adveniat regnum tuum,
fiat voluntas tua sicut in caelo et in terra, panem nostrum supersubstantialem da nobis hodie,
et dimitte nobis debita nostra sicut et nos dimittimus debitoribus nostris, et ne inducas nos in temptationem,
sed libera nos a malo.

FRENCH.

From the Geneva version of 1588, as revised by David Martin original edition, Amsterdam, 1707, fol.

Nôtre Père qui es aux cieux, ton Nom soit sanctifié.
Ton Règne vienne.
Ta volonté soit faite en la terre comme au ciel.
Donne nous aujourd'hui nôtre pain quotidien
Et nous quitte nos dettes, comme nous quittons aussi les dettes à nos débiteurs.
Et ne nous induis point en tentation, mais délivre nous du Malin.
Car à toi est le rogne, & la puissance, & la gloire à jamais, Amen.

GAELIC.

From the version of the New Testament by the Rev. James Stuart, as published by the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, Edinburgh, 1813, 12mo. (First printed in 1767.)

Ar n-Athair a ta air nèamh,
Gu naomhaichear t'ainm.
Thigeadh do rìoghachd.
Deanar do thoil air an talamh, mar a nìthear air nèamh.
Tabhair dhuinn an diugh ar n-aran laitheil.
Agus maith dhuinn ar fiacha, anuill mar a mhaithreas sinn d'ar luchd-fìach.
Agus na leig am buaireadh sinn,
ach saor sinn o oile:
Oiris leat an rìoghachd, agus an cumhachd agus a' ghloir, gu sìorruidh. Amen.

IRISH.

From the version of Uiliam O. Domhnuill, or William Daniel, as published by the British and Foreign Bible Society, London, 1817, 8vo. (First printed in 1603.)

Ar Nathair atá ar neamh,
Náomhtar hainm.
Tigheadh do ríoghachd.
Deántar do thoil ar an tialamh, mar do nítheas
ar neamh.
Ar nárán laéthamhail tabhair dhúinn a níu.
Agus maith dhúinn ar bhfiacha, mar mhaitimídne dar bhféitheamhuibh féin.
Agus na léig sinn a coathughadh,
achd sáor inn ó oí:
Oir is leachd féin an ríoghachd, agus an chúm-hachd, agus an ghloir, go síorruighe, Amen.

Agricola, having done much in spite of pride and prejudice to civilize the Britons, conducted the Roman legions to the foot of the Grampians and had to encounter the Caledonians under Galgacus, where the battles, bloodshed, and desolation of the south, in the maintenance of independence, had to be repeated in the north. These powerful opponents seem to have descended from the same Celtic race, though they had probably reached the northern forests by a different route, and many were the encounters in which they bore themselves bravely in skirmishing with the Romans or breaking down the wall that their enemies had stretched from the Forth to the Clyde.

About the commencement of the fourth century, a new enemy approached the British coast; whilst the Goth was pouring his legions into Italy. The Roman soldiers were withdrawn from Britain to defend Rome; and, as the Britons had become to a great extent unaccustomed to war, they, in order to defend their country from the ravages of the Picts and Scots, now invited the Saxons to aid them in their defence.

This brings us to another era in the history of England, and introduces, not another element into the composition of her language, but the very nucleus around which all other ingredients were to cluster. "These Saxons," to use the language of their historian, "in the days of Ptolemy, just darkened the neck of the peninsula of Jutland and three inconsiderable islands in its neighbourhood. One of the obscure tribes, whom Providence selected and trained to form the nobler nations of France, Germany, and England, and who have accomplished their distinguished destiny." These Saxons, who soon lorded it over those whom they had come to aid, were a German or Gothic race, and spoke a language entirely different from that of the Celts, or ancient Britons, and were no doubt settled at an early period in Europe. After many conflicts, which it is the part of the historian to record, we have to note the amalgamation of the British and Saxon population; while a remnant of the Britons retired into Wales, and carried their ancient language along with them,—just as the Celts in Scotland retired before their Gothic invaders to their mountain fastnesses, where their descendants still speak the language of their forefathers, which is closely allied to the Welsh, the Irish, and the Manx.

The success of the first Saxon immigrants no doubt encouraged others of the same race to land on the shores of Britain, and secure for themselves "a local habitation." From a leading branch, called Angles, the country was called England, and the prevailing language became known as Anglo-Saxon, or simply Saxon. The Saxons cultivated literature, and Cædmon, Bede, and King Alfred are well known among their writers. Cædmon had been called the father of English song. Connected with the monks of Whitby, he appears to have acted as their herdsman. He was so little gifted with the power of song, that, when the harp was passed round at any convivial meeting, he shrunk from its approach, and retired to his own apartment. After retiring ashamed from such a meeting, he laid himself down and slept. In his sleep, some one desired him to sing something, to whom he replied that he could not. Upon the repetition of the demand, he asked what he should sing. "Sing me," said the voice in his dreaming ear, "the origin of things." He accordingly composed an ode on this subject, and still retained it in memory when he awoke. He was admitted into the monastery as a monk, and wrote numerous other poems on religious subjects—that on the Fall of Man bearing no small resemblance to some passages in Paradise Lost. His death occurred in the year 680. We subjoin a specimen of this poem, accompanied with a translation:—

Nu we sceolan herian
heofon-rices weard, metodes mihte,
and his mod-ge-thenc,
wera wuldor fæder!
awa he wundra ge-hwæs,
eoe dryhten,
oord onstealde.
He ærest ge-scop

heofon to hrofe,
halig sceppend!
tha middan-geard
mon-cynnes weard,
eoe dryhten,
æfter teode,
frum foldan,
frea slæmhtig!

Now we shall praise
the guardian of heaven,
the might of the creator,
and his counsel,
the glory-father of men!
how he of all wonders,
the eternal lord,
formed the beginning.
He first created for the children of men heaven as a roof,
the holy creator!
then the world
the guardian of mankind,
the eternal lord,
produced afterwards,
the earth for men,
the almighty master!

It will be observed that these lines are neither distinguished by an exact number of syllables in their construction nor by rhyme in their termination. The lines, however, are nearly of equal length, and a peculiar alliteration may be observed in their composition; for in every couplet, as may be readily noticed in the last of the above quotation, two principal words in the one line begin with the same letter, which is repeated in the first principal word in the second. It is remarkable how early this practice began, which forces itself on our notice as still more extensively employed by subsequent writers, who used the same letter at the beginning of every word in lines of considerable length, as, "They waughtit at the wight wine and wared out words."

In Spenser, long after rhyme had been introduced, we find it in a somewhat more refined form, as when alliteration occurs in pairs of words in the same line; thus,

"The lily, lady of the flowery field;"

or,

"Nor timely tides did drive out of their sluggish source;"

or when the same letter is initial in several words, as,

"That art thus fowly fled from famous enemy," which readily suggests a line, which proves that this ornament of the earliest Saxon poem is not rejected in the highest poetry of the present day; for Childe Harold, describing the death of the Duke of Brunswick, says that he sat

"Within a window'd niche of that high hall," and, having caught the sound of the cannon's opening roar,

"He rushed into the field, and, foremost fighting, fell."

We shall here present versions of the Lord's Prayer in three collateral languages, that the student may compare them with the Anglo-Saxon:—

GOTHIC. (Fourth century.)

From the edition of Ulfilas by Gabelentz and Loebe, Leipzig, 1893-1896, 4to.

DANISH.

From the Danish Bible published by the British and Foreign Bible Society, London, 1855, 8vo.

Vor Fader, du som er i Himlene!
 Helliget vordet dit Navn;

GERMAN.

From Luther's version, as edited by Tischendorf in his "Novum Testamentum Triglotum," Leipzig, 1854. The orthography is modernised. Luther's translation of the New Testament was first published, anonymously, in 1522.

Unser Vater in dem Himmel.
 Dein Name werde gehelliget.
 Dein Reich komme
 Dein Wille geschehe auf Erden wie im Himmel.
 Unser täglich Brot gib uns heute.
 Und vergib uns unsere Schulden, wie wir unsern
 Schuldigern vergeben.
 Und führe uns nicht in Versuchung, sondern erlöse uns von dem Uebel
 Denn dein ist das Reich und die Kraft und die
 Herrlichkeit in Ewigkeit, Amen.

Passing over some names of inferior note, we come to that of Bede, who is usually denominated the Venerable. He spent his studious life in the monastery of Wearmouth, where he died in 785. His principal works consist of scriptural translations, biographies; and an ecclesiastical history of the Anglo-Saxons. The next name that arrests our attention is that of ALFRED, which brings us to the beginning of the tenth century. He is well known to every reader of history for his successful struggles against the Danish invaders, as an enlightened law-giver, and as he who first gave England a navy that enabled her to assert that superiority on the deep which she has ever since successfully maintained. He claims our notice, however, as a promoter of learning, and cultivator of literature. His literary labours consist chiefly, if not exclusively, of translations of historical and philosophical works, together with the Psalms of David, into the vulgar tongue, in order that his subjects might be profited by their perusal. CAWENA, whose demise occurred in 1086, was author of a ballad long popular in England; and a few others, among whom some ecclesiastics are conspicuous, bring down the Anglo-Saxon literature to the time of the Conquest, which thus extends over a space of five hundred years, and in which a fresh interest has of late been manifested by the publication of Dictionaries of the language, and specimens of its literature.

We have thus seen the Briton superseded by the Saxon, and now the Saxon is about to give way to the Norman.

William, Duke of Normandy, known in English history as the Conqueror, cloaked his ambition to reign in Britain by an accusation of sacrilege against Harold, and came armed with a bull of excommunication against the Saxon king and his adherents, and a banner consecrated by the head of the church to shed the blood of Christians! Victory, after a noble contest on the part of the English, declared in favour of the Normans, and ultimately England was in their hands. The victory of Hastings was gained on the 14th October, 1066. The conquest introduced a change of language and literature; for a writer about the middle of the fourteenth century informs us that children were taught to speak French from their cradle, and that even the rustic aped the gentleman by endeavouring to speak French, and thus it is probable that the Normans diffused their tongue to a considerable extent throughout the land. The Saxon language, however, was not conquered, but in the course of the twelfth century it underwent great grammatical changes. The inflectional terminations of nouns, and apparently arbitrary distinctions of genders were abolished; the words were thus shortened, and their sounds must consequently have been altered; and hence may be dated the commencement of the language that is now known as English. Before the conquest, the troubadours had arisen in France, and exercised their poetical talents in the composition of romantic poems; and a Norman poet, named Taillefer, advanced before the army, chanting the ballad of Charlemagne and Roland, and was permitted to strike the first blow on the field of Hastings. WACE, a native of Jersey, about 1150 composed a narrative poem, called Le Brut d'Angleterre (Brutus of England), a work which is worthy of notice, both on account of its embodying the traditional literature that had been wafted down from the days of the Celts, and the tinge it imparted to the works of subsequent authors; for Spenser and Shakespeare were indebted to it. Dryden has reproduced not a little of it, and allusions to it may be found even in the poetry of Milton.

But we are now approaching an important era in English literature; for, according to Dr. Johnson, the Saxon, about 1154, "began to take a form in which the beginning of the present English may plainly be discovered." About 1180, LAYMON produced a translation, in English verse, of the Brut d'Angleterre, to which we have already referred; a few lines will show the approximation of the language of that day to that of the present.

He nom the Engliſhes boe
 Tha makede Seint Bede;
 An other he nom on Lexia,
 Tha makede Seinte Albin,
 And the fetro Austen.
 The fulfint browte hider in.
 Boe he nom the thridde,

That is, literally:—

He took the English book
That Saint Bede made;
Another he took in Latin,
That Saint Albin made,
And the fair Austin,
That baptism brought hither in.
The third book he took,
[And] laid there in midst,
That made a French clerk,
Wace was [he] called,
And he it gave to the noble
Eleanor, that was Henry's queen,
The high king's.
Layamon laid [before him] these books,
And the leaves turned.
He them lovingly beheld;
Merciful to him be [the] Lord.
Feather [pen] he took with fingers,
And wrote on book-skin,
And the true words
Set together,
And the three books
Compressed into one.

About the end of the thirteenth century, we meet with a series of writers that may be called the RYMING CHRONICLERS. Among these we meet with ROBERT of Gloucester, the language of whose Chronicle may be judged of from the following specimen:—

"Thus come lo! Engelande into Normannes honde,
And the Normans ne couthe speke tho bote her owe speche,
And speke French as dunde stom, and here chyliden
dude al so teches,
So that heyemen of thys lond, that of her blod come,
Holdeth alle thulke speche that hil of hem nome.
Ver bote a man outhes French, me toith of hym
well uite:
Ac lowe men holdeth to Englyse and to her kunde speche yute.
Ich wene ther be ne man in world contreyes none
That ne holdeth to her kunde speche, but Eng-lond one.
Ac wel me wot vor to come bothe wel yt ys, Vor the more that a man con the more worth he ys."

The next is ROBERT MARSHALL, who flourished in the latter part of the reign of Edward I., and through that of Edward II. He translated a French Chronicle of England, written by Peter de Langtoft, who was a contemporary of his own. The following specimen is given in modern spelling:—

The Interview of Vortigern with Rowen, the Beautiful Daughter of Hengist.

Hengist that day did his might,
That all were glad, king and knight,
And as they were best in glading,
And well cup-shotten, knight and king,
Of chamber Rowen so went,
Before the king in hall she went.

A cup with wine she had in hand,
And her attire was well farrand.
Before the king on knee set,
And in her language she him greet.
"Loverd king, wassail!" said she.
The king asked, What should be.
On that language the king ne outh.
A knight her language lerid in youth,
Breght hight that knight, born Breton,
That lerid the language of Baxon.
This Breght was the latimer,
What she said told Vortigern.
"Sir," Breght said, "Rowen you greets,
And king calls and lord you leets.
This is their custom and their gest,
When they are at the ale or feast,
Ik man that loves where him think,
Shall say, Wassail! and to him drink.
He that bids shall say, Wassail!
The tother shall say again, Drinkhall!
That says Wassail drinks of the cup,
Kissing his fellow he gives it up.
Drinkhall he says, and drinks thereof,
Kissing him in bourd and skof."
The king said, as the knight gan ken,
"Drinkhall," smiling on Rowena.
Rowen drank as her list,
And gave the king, syne him kissed.
There was the first wassail in dede,
And that first of fame goed.
Of that wassail men told great tale,
And wassail when they are at ale,
And drinkhall to them that drank,
Thus was wassail ta'en to thank.
Fell eithes that maiden ying
Wassailed and kissed the king.
Of body she was right avenant,
Of fair colour with sweet semblant.
Her attire full well it seemed,
Mervelik the king she queemed.
Of our measure was he glad,
For of that maiden he wax all mad.
Drunkenness the fiend wrought,
Of that paen was all his thought.
A mischance that time him lod,
He asked that paen for to wed.
Hengist would not draw o life,
Bot granted him all so tite.
And Hors his brother consented soon.
Her friends said, it were to done.
They asked the king to give her Kent,
In dowery to take of rent.
Upon that maiden his heart was cast;
That they asked the king made fast,
I wene the king took her that day,
And wedded her on paen's lay.

"Putting aside," says Professor Craik, "the authors of some of the best of the early metrical romances, whose names are generally or universally unknown, perhaps the earliest writer of English verse, subsequent to the Conquest, who deserves the name of a poet, is LAWRENCE MINOR, who lived and wrote about the middle of the fourteenth century, and of the reign of Edward III." His poems are in celebration of the battles and victories of that king. The following specimen, in modernized spelling, is taken from that on Edward's first expedition to France:—

Sir Philip the Valais
Wit his men in the days
To battle had he thought:
He bade his men them purvey
Withouten langer delay;
But he ne held it nought.

He brought folk full great won,
Age seven agins one,
That full well weaponed were,
Bot soon when he heard assey
That king Edward was near thereby,
Then durst he nought come near.

In that morning fell a mist,
And when our Englishmen it wist,
It changed all their cheer;
Our king unto God made his boon,
And God sent him good comfort soon;
The weather wax full clear.

Our king and his men held the field
Stalworthly with spear and shield,
And thought to win his right;
With liores and with knights keen,
And other doughty men bydean
That war full frek to fight.

When Sir Philip of France heard tell
That king Edward in field wald dwell,
Then gained him no glee:
He traisted of no better boot,
Bot both on horse and on foot,
He hasted him to flee.

It seemed he was feared for strokes
When he did fell his greates oaks
About his pavilion;
Abated was then all his pride,
For langer there durst he nought bide;
His boast was brought all down.

There is a poetical work of the middle of the fourteenth century that is so often referred to in general literature, that we cannot pass it over in silence. This is the Vision of Piers Ploughman, the author of which is commonly called Robert Langland, but of whom scarcely any thing is known. It is an allegory, on the impediments and temptations that lie in the way of the Pilgrim, and is remarkable for its attacks on the corruptions of the church, and on the indolence and ignorance of the ecclesiastical order. In its structure, regard is had not to the absolute number of syllables in a line, but to the number of accented syllables, while alliteration is still prevalent in its composition—arising partly from custom, and partly from established poetical phraseology. The following extract is taken from the first Passus, or division:—

I found there freres,
All the four orders,
Preaching the people
For profit of hem selve
Glosed the gospel
As hem good liked;
For covetise of copes
Construed it as they would.
Many of these master freres
Now clothe hem at liking,
For hir money and hir merchandize
Marchen togedere.
For sith charity hath been chapman
And chief to shrive loads,
Many ferlies han fallen
In a few years;
But holy church and hi
Fold better togedere,
The most mischief on moud
Is mounting well fast.
There preached a pardoner,
As he a priest were;
Brought forth a bull
With many bishops' seals,
And said that himself might Assolven hem all,
Of falsehede of fasting,
Of avowes y-broken.
Lewed men loved it well,
And liked his words;
Comen up kneeling
To kisen his bulls;
He bouched hem with his brevet,
And bleared hir eyen,
And raught with his ragman
Ringes and brooches.

This remarkable poem brings us now to the threshold of our living literature; for, although the poem of Langland might be read with interest, yet it would be more on account of its language with one set of readers and of its subject with another, than for gratification in its poetical grace.

CHAUCEER, therefore, is still our first great poet—the Honor of English poetry. He is supposed to have been born in 1338, and so may have been contemporary with Langland. The works of Chaucer are voluminous, occupying no fewer than eight volumes of Bell's edition of the English Poets. The best known and most carefully edited of his numerous works, are his Canterbury Tales—although, as we have seen, he was not the first poet who introduced the ornament of rhyme, yet he greatly polished the measures in which he wrote, and is supposed to have been the first who employed the decasyllabic metre, or what has been called our heroic verse. He is recognized by subsequent poets, who ought to be the best judges, as the reformer of the language and their instructor in the tuneful art. Gavin Douglas calls him “Venerable Chaucer, principal poet, but peer,” and Spenser, looking back through two centuries, regards him as the “well of English undefiled.” We give the following from his famous Tales as a specimen:—

The Good Parson.

A true good man there was there of religion,
Pious and poor—the parson of a town.
But rich he was in holy thought and work;
And thereto a right learned man, a clerk
That Christ's pure gospel would sincerely preach,
And his parishioners devoutly teach.
Benign he was, and wondrous diligent,
And in adversity full patient.
As proven oft; to all who lack'd a friend.
Loth for his tithes to ban or to contend.
At every need much rather was he found
Unto his poor parishioners around
Of his own substance and his dues to give:
Content on little, for himself, to live.

Wida was his cure; the houses far asunder,
Yet never failed he, or for rain or thunder,
Whenever sickness or mischance might call,
The most remote to visit, great or small.
And, staff in hand, on foot, the storm to brave.
This noble ensample to his flock he gave,
That first he wrought, afterward he taught;
The word of life he from the gospel caught;
And well this comment added he thereto.
If that gold rusteth, what should iron do?
And if the priest be foul on whom we trust,
What wonder if the unletter'd layman lust?
And shame it were in him the flock should keep,
To see a sullied shepherd, and clean sheep.
For sure a priest the sample ought to give
By his own cleanness how his sheep should live.

He never set his benefice to hire,
Leaving his flock acomber'd in the mire,
And ran to London cogging at St Paul's,
To seek himself a chauntry for souls,
Or with a brotherhood to be enroll'd;
But dwelt at home, and guarded well his fold,
So that it should not by the wolf miscarry.
He was a shepherd, and no mercenary.

Tho' holy in himself, and virtuous,
He still to sinful men was mild and piteous:
Not of reproach imperious or malign;
But in his teaching soothing and benign.
To draw them on to heaven, by reason fair
And good example, was his daily care.
But were there one perverse and obstinate,
Were he of lofty or of low estate,
Him would he sharply with reproof astound.
A better priest is no where to be found.
He waited not on pomp or reverence,
Nor made himself a spiced conscience.
The lore of Christ and his apostles twelve
He taught: but, first, he followed it himself.

The latter part of the fourteenth century is memorable for what may be considered the birth of

Scottish poetry, and Chaucer had no unworthy contemporary and rival in JOHN BARBOUR, Archdeacon of Aberdeen, the language of whose work, The Bruce, is as intelligible as that of Chaucer. Although Pinkerton's edition is now before us and the following passage has often been quoted, yet it is so characteristic of Barbour's poetry, and the sentiments so honourable to the poet, that we cannot supersede it by another quotation :—

A ! fredome is a nobill thing !
 Fredome mayse man to haif liking ;
 Fredome all solace to man giffis :
 He levys at ese that frely levys !
 A noble hart may haif nane ese,
 Na ellys nocht that may him plesse,
 Gyff fredome failyhe : for fre liking
 Is yharnt our all othir thing
 Na he, that ay hase levyt fre,
 May nocht knaw weil the propyrte
 The angyr, na the wrochyt dome,
 That is cowplyt to foule thyrldome.
 Bot gyff he had assayit it,
 Than all perquer he suld it wyt ;
 And suld think freedome mar to pryse
 Than all the gold in warld that is.

And thyrldom is weil wer than deid,
 For quhill a thryll his lyf may leid,
 It mervys him, body and banyis,
 And dede anyois him bot anyt
 Schorty to say is nane can tell
 The halle condition of a thryll !

That we may afford a specimen of the prose of the age of which we are treating, we fondly turn to the oldest translation of the New Testament, by John Wiclif, "the morning star of the Reformation," who died about the age of sixty, in 1384. The edition from which we quote is that of Baber, 1810.

1 CORINTHIANS, ch. XIII.

If I speke with tungis of men and of aunceis and I have not charite, I am maad as bras sownynge, or a cymbal tynklynge. And if a haue profecie and knowe alle mysteries and al kynnyng, and if I haue al feith, so that I moue hillis fro her place, and I haue not charite I am nought. and if I departe alle my goodis into the metis of pore men, and if I bitake my bodi so that I brenne and if I haue not charite it profitith to me no thing. charite is pacient, it is benygne. charite envyeth not, it doith not wickidli, it is not blowun, it is not couetous, it seekith not tho thingis that ben hise owne. it is not stired to wrath, it thenkith not yuel, it ioieth not on wickidnesse, but it ioieth togidre to treuthis, it suffrih alle thingis, it bileueth alle thingis, it hopith alle thingis, it susteyneth alle thingis. charite alith neuere down. whether profecies schulen be voidid, eithir langagis schulen ceese, eithir science schal be distried, for aparti we knowen, and aparti we proficien, but whanne that schal come that is parfyt, that thing that is of parti schal be autoid. whanne I was a litil child I spak as a litil child, I undirstood as a litil child, I thoughte as a litil child ; but whanne I was maade a man I voidide tho thingis that weren of a litil child. and we seen now bi a morour in derknesse, but thanne face to face. now I knowe of parti, but thanne I schal knowe as I am known. and now dwellen feith, hope and charite theese thre, but the moost of theese is charite.

The earliest successor of Barbour was ANDREW WYNTOWN, a Prior of the monastery of St. Serf's Inch in Lochleven. His Ormyngale Cronykil of Scotland appears to have been finished in the beginning of the fifteenth century. It is written in the same measure with The Bruce, but we miss the sustained dignity and poetic warmth of the Arch-deacon in the Prior. His work, however, is clear, though quaint in style, and is valuable in an historical point of view ; of the nine books, of which the work consists, only the last four are devoted to Scottish history. These, with valuable notes, were admirably edited by David Macpherson and published in 1795, from which edition we make the following extract, not only as furnishing a specimen of Wynthown's style, but as embodying the oldest Scottish song now known to exist. The Chronicle thus describes the character of Alexander III. :—

Scotland menyd hym than ful sere :
 For wndyr hym all his Legis ware
 In Honour, Qwyete, and in Pes ;
 Forthi cald PRINCE KYNG he wes.
 He honoryd God and Haly Kyrk ;
 And medful dedis he oysyd to wyrk.
 Til all Prestis he dyd reverens,
 And sawfyd thare Statis wyth diligens.
 He was stedfast in Crystyn Fay ;
 Relygyows men he honoryde ay ;
 He lwyd men, that war wretowis ;
 He lathyd and chastyd al vytowis
 Be Justis he gave and Eglyte
 Til ilke man, that his suld be.
 That, he mycht noucht til Wertu drawe,
 He held ay wndyr dourt and awe.
 He gert chasty mysdooris
 As Lauch wald be thare maneris.
 The Lauch he gert he keypd wellis
 In all bys Kynryk ilka dele.
 He led his lyf in Honeste,
 Devotyoun, and Chastyte.
 Til Lordis, Knyghtis, and Sqwyeris,
 That ware plesand of maneris,
 He was lele, iuvand and libérale,
 And all wretowis in Governale.
 He was kret of Almows Dede.
 Til all, that he could wyt, had nede.

This Sang was made of hym for-thi.

- * Quhen Alyсандyr oure Kyng was dede,
 That Scotland led in Luwe and Le,
 Away was Sons of Ale and Brede,
 Of Wyne and Wax, of Gamyn and Gle :

"Oure Gold was changyd in-to Lede.
 Cryst, borne in-to Virgynyte,
 Succour Scotland, and remede,
 That stad is in perplexyte."

But of all the poets of the beginning of the fifteenth century the palm must undoubtedly be awarded to King James I. of Scotland, and, as he was kept a prisoner and educated in England, The King's Quene may be regarded as still furnishing an illustration of the state of the language at that period. Looking in the morning through the grating of his prison, he sees a lady in the adjacent garden, and he thus describes the scene and his emotions :—

— Kest I down mine eye again,
 Where as I saw, walking under the Toure,
 Full secretly, new comen hir to plain,
 The fairest or the freschest young flour
 That ever I saw, methought, before that houre,
 For which sudden abate, anon astert,
 The blood of all my body to my hert.

And though I stood abasit tho a lyte
 No wonder was ; for why ? my wittis all
 Were so o'ercome with plesance and delygth,
 Only through letting of my eye fall,
 That suddenly my hert became hir thrall,
 For ever of free will—for of menace
 There was no takyn in her suete face.

And in my head I drew right hastily,
 And eft sones I leant it out again,
 And saw her walk, that very womanly,
 With no wight mo', but only woman twain.
 Then gan I study in myself, and sayne :
 ' Ah, sweet ! are ye a waridly creature,
 Or heavenly thing in likeness of nature ?

' Or are ye god Cupidis own princess,
 And comyn are to loose me out of band ?

Or are ye very Nature the goddess,
That have depainted with your heavenly hand,
This garden full of flowers as they stand?
What sell I think, alas! what reverence
Shall I mester unto your exaltance?

'If ye a goddess be, and that ye like
To do me pain, I may it not asert;
If ye be waridly wight, that doth me sike,
Why list God make you so, my dearest hert,
To do a sely prisoner this smert,
That luffe you all, and wote of nought but wo?
And therefore merot, sweet! sine it is so.'

Of hir array the form if I sell write,
Toward her golden hair and rich attire,
In fretwise couchit with perlis white
And great belas lemyng as the fire,
With many ane emerant and fair saphire;
And on her head a chaplet fresch of hue,
Of plumis parted red, and white, and blue.

Full of quaking spangis bright as gold,
Forged of shape like to the amoretis,
So new, so fresch, so pleasant to behold,
The plumis eke like to the flower jonetis,
And other of shape, like to the flower jonetis;
And above all this, there was, well I wot,
Beautee enough to mak a world to dote.

About hir neck, white as the fire amaille,
A goodly chain of small orfrevy,
Whereby there hung a ruby, without faille,
Like to ane heart shapen verily,
That as a sperk of low, so wantonly
Seemed birning upon her white throte,
Now gif there was good party, God it wot.

And for to walk that fresh May's morowe,
Ane hook she had upon her tissue whorwe,
That goodlier had not been sene to-forowe,
As I suppose; and girt she was alite.
Thus halffing loose for haste, to suich delight
It was to see her youth in goodlihede,
That for rudenes to speak thereof I drede—

In her was youth, beautee, with humble apert,
Bountee, richesse, and womanly fature,
God better wote than my pen can report:
Wisdomme, largesse, estate, and cunning sure,
In every point so guided her mesure,
In word, in dede, in schap, in countenance,
That nature might no more hir child avance!

A new day may be said to dawn with the beginning of the sixteenth century; for Warton says that HAWES's Pastime of Pleasure is almost the only effort of imagination which had appeared in our poetry since the days of Chaucer. Chambers says "it is full of thought, of ingenious analogy, and occasionally of striking allegory," and gives the following stanzas, stripped of the antiquated spelling:—

The Temple of Mars.

Beside this tower of old foundation,
There was a temple strongly edified,
To the high honour and reputation
Of the mighty Mars it was so fortified;
And for to know what it signified
I entered in, and saw of gold so pure
Of worthy Mars, the marvellous picture.

There was depainted all about the wall
The great destruction of the siege of Troy,
And the noble acts to reign memorial
Of the worthy Hector that was all their joy,
His dolorous death was hard to oocyte:
And so when Hector was cast all down,
The hardy Trolius was most high of renown.

And as I cast my sight so aside,
Beholding Mars how wonderfully he stood

On a wheel top, with a lady of pride,
Hannuced about, I thought nothing but good
But that she had two faces in one hood;
Yet I knelt down, and made my orison
To doughty Mars with great devotion.

Saying: 'O Mars! O god of the war!
The gentle load-star of an hardy heart,
Distill adown thy grace from so far,
To cause all fear from me to start,
That in the field I may right well subvert
The hideous monsters, and win the victory
Of the sturdy giants with famous chivalry.'

'O prince of honour and of worthy fame!
O noble knights of old antiquity!
O redoubted courage, the causer of their name,
Whose worthy acts Fame caused to be
In books written, as ye well may see—
So give me grace right well to recure
The power of fame that shall so long endure.'

Among the prose writers of this period, we may take note of ROBERT FABIAN, who was sheriff of London, and died in 1512. The following account of the deposition of King Vertugern, is taken from his Concordance of Stories :—

Of this holy man, St. Germain, Vincent Historial saith, that upon an evening when the weather was passing cold, and the snow fell very fast, he axed lodging of the king of Britain, for him and his companions, which was denied. Then he, after sitting under a bush in the field, the king's herdsman passed by, and seeing this bishop with his company sitting in the weather, desired him to his house to take there such poor lodging as he had. Whereof the bishop being glad and fain, yode unto the house of the said herdsman, the which received him with glad cheer. And for him and his company, willed his wife to kill his only calf, and to dress it for his guest's supper; the which was also done. When the holy man had supped, he called to him his hostess, willing and desiring her that she should diligently gather together all the bones of the dead calf, and them so gathered, to wrap together within the skin of the said calf. And then it lay in the stall before the rack near unto the dame. Which done according to the commandment of the holy man, shortly after the calf was restored to life; and forthwith ate lay with the dame at the rack. At which marvel all the house was greatly astonished, and yielded thanking unto Almighty God and to that holy bishop.

Upon the morrow, this holy bishop took with him the herdsman, and yode unto the presence of the king, and axed of him in sharp wise, why that overnight he had denied to him lodging. Wherewith the king was so abashed, that he had no power to give unto the holy man answer. Then St. Germain said to him: 'I charge thee, in the name of the Lord God, that thou and thine depart from this palace, and resign it and the rule of thy land to him that is more worthy this room than thou art.' The which all thing by power divine was observed and done; and the said herdsman, by the holy bishop's authority, was set into the same dignity; of whom after descended all the kings of Britain.

Tracing the progress of our language to what has been termed the Elizabethan age (though the literature of the period so denominated, belongs not merely to the sixteenth, but also to the seventeenth century) we then observe a variety of influences, such as the study of classical learning, the invention of printing, the substitution of the philosophy of Plato for that of Aristotle, and the freedom of religious discussion, operating powerfully in expanding the intellect of the nations of Europe. To these general considerations, which could not fail to operate in England, must be added the encouragement which Elizabeth, herself possessed of no mean literary acquirements, offered to learning, and the impulse given to the national mind by the circulation of the Scriptures in the language of her subjects.

THOMAS SACKVILLE, Earl of Dorset, was the author of the Mirror for Magistrates, an extract from which may properly be introduced before we take leave of our reader on the introduction of Spenser.

And next in order sad, Old Age we found :
His beard all hoar, his eyes hollow and blind ;
With drooping cheek still poring on the ground,
As on the place where nature him assigned
To rest, when the sisters had untwined
His vital thread, and ended with their knife
The fleeting course to fast declining life :

There heard we him with broke and hollow plaint
Rue with himself his end approaching fast,
And all for nought his wretched mind torment
With sweet remembrance of his pleasures past,
And fresh delights of lusty youth forewaste ;
Recounting which, how would he sob and shriek,
And to be young again of Jove beseech !

But, an the cruel fates so fixed be
That time forepast cannot return again,
This one request of Jove yet prayed he—
That, in such weathered plight, and wretched pain,
As eld, accompanied with her loathsome train,
He brought on him, all were it wo and grief
He might a while yet hunger forth his life,

And not so soon descend into the pit ;
Where Death, when he the mortal corpse hath slain,
With reckless hand in grave doth cover it :
Thereafter never to enjoy again
The gladsome light, but, in the ground ylain,
In depth of darkness waste and wear to nought,
As he had ne'er into the world been brought :

But who had seen him sobbing how he stood
Unto himself, and how he would bemoan
His youth forepast—as though it wrought him good
To talk of youth, all were his youth foregone—
He would have mused, and marvelled much whereon
This wretched Age should life desire so fain,
And knows full well life doth but length his pain :

Crook-backed he was, tooth-shaken, and blear-eyed ;
Went on three feet, and sometime crept on four ;
With old lame bones, that rattled by his side ;
His scalp all piled, and he with eld forelore,
His weathered fist still knocking at death's door
Fumbling, and driveling, as he draws his breath,
For brief, the shape and messenger of death.

When we name SPENSER, we feel as if we had arrived among our modern poets. The date, 1553, is given as that of the year of his birth, and he is supposed to have come before the world as a poet so early as 1589. His great work is the Faery Queene, in which, under the direction of Gloriana, a number of personages, representing so many virtues, set forth to vanquish the vices opposed to their nature. But we feel little interest either in the personages or their adventures ; the mind is absorbed in the beauty of the poetry in which these are described ; for it is the imagination of the poet in conceiving, and his fancy in adorning these conceptions, together with the exuberance, fluency, grace, and beauty of the language, that delight the reader : whilst a spirit of nobleness, gentleness, love, and chivalry pervades the whole. But we must deny ourselves the pleasure of expatiating on the exquisite productions of Spenser, and permit him briefly to speak for himself, merely stripping his words of a few superfluous letters.

Una and the Redcross Knight.

A gentle knight was pricking on the plain,
Yclad in mighty arms and silver shield,

Wherein old dints of deep wounds did remain,
The cruel marks of many a bloody field ;
Yet arms till that time did he never wield ;
His angry steed did chide his foaming bit,
As much disdainful to the curb to yield :
Full jolly knight he seemed, and fair did sit,
As one for knightly jousts and fierce encounters fit.

And on his breast a bloody cross he bore,
The dear remembrance of his dying Lord,
For whose sweet sake that glorious badge he wore,
And dead—as living—ever him adored :
Upon his shield the like was also scored,
For sovereign hope, which in his help he had ;
Right faithful true he was in deed and word ;
But of his cheer did seem too solemn sad :
Yet nothing did he dread, but ever was ydrad.

Upon a great adventure he was bound,
That greatest Gloriana to him gave—
That greatest glorious queen of fairy land—
To win him worship, and her grace to have,
Which of all earthly things he most did crave ;
And ever as he rode his heart did yearn
To prove his puissance in battle brave
Upon his foe, and his new force to learn ;
Upon his foe, a dragon horrible and stern.

A lovely lady rode him fair beside,
Upon a lowly ass more white than snow ;
Yet she much whiter, but the same did hide
Under a veil that wimpled was full low,
And over all a black stole she did throw,
As one that truly mourned : so was she sad,
And heavy set upon her palmyr slow ;
Seemed in heart some hidden care she had,
And by her in a line a milk-white lamb she led.

So pure and innocent, as that same lamb,
She was in life and every virtuous lore,
And by descent from royal lineage came
Of ancient kings and queens, that had of yore
Their sceptres stretcht from east to western shore,
And all the world in their subjection held ;
'Till that infernal fiend with foul uproar
Forewasted all their land and them expelled ;
Whom to avenge, she had this knight from far compelled

Behind her far away a dwarf did lag,
That lazy seemed in being ever last,
Or wearied with bearing of her bag
Of needments at his back. Thus as they past
The day with clouds was sudden overcast,
And angry Jove an hideous storm of rain
Dud pour into his leman's lap so fast,
That every wight to shroud it did constrain,
And this fair couple eke to shroud themselves were fain.

Enforced to seek some covert nigh at hand,
A shady grove not far away they spied,
That promised aid the tempest to withstand ;
Whose lofty trees, yclad with summer's pride,
Did spread so broad, that heaven's light did hide,
Nor pierceable with power of any star :
And all within were paths and alleys wide,
With footing worn, and leading inward far :
Fair harbour, that them seems ; so in they entered are.

* * Our limited space has obliged us to present a very imperfect view of an interesting subject, even within the range which we had prescribed to ourselves ; but those who may be incited by these remarks still farther to prosecute this study, will find ample materials in the works of Ellis, Chambers, Latham, Craik, Spalding, and other cultivators of the same field.

A CATALOGUE OF ENGLISH DICTIONARIES.

THE following is a Catalogue of English Dictionaries, properly so called; for we have purposely omitted some of the most ancient Dictionaries published in England, such as the Dictionary of Sir Thomas Elyot, published in 1538, because it was Latin and English; neither have we admitted into this brief list Dictionaries of Theology, Law, Medicine, Chemistry, Arts and Sciences, &c.

"There are many points," says Worcester, "relating to English lexicography that are not easily ascertained. Many of the Dictionaries have had their titles changed from those which were given them in the first edition; many of them have been much altered by the labour of subsequent editors; with respect to some, it is not easy to ascertain the date of the first edition; and some have undoubtedly been published which have passed into oblivion, and are now entirely unknown."
